The Dropping Prices No Compromise for Some The Government Job All Long for Peace

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1920.

Prices drop in all directions, sugar, automobiles, cotton goods, beef and labor.

The drop is not due to any man's desire to make living cheaper. No one man, no dozen, can influence prices on a big scale.

Prices are dropping because the supply exceeds the buying capacity.

Brick manufacturers, that ought to be in jail, offer to cut their prices in order that they can escape prosecution for conspiracy to rob the public.

There should be no compromise with these highwaymen, for they and other thieves associated with them in building material profiteering are responsible for the fact that there has been no building, and responsible for the consequent lack of housing.

Whatever intelligence there may be in government—it does not make itself offensively conspicuous—should deal with the important problem expressed as follows:

How can employment be supplied for those willing to work as the demand from private enterprise grows less? The dullest mind must have learned from this war that government cannot permit wholesale lack of employment and the unrest born of it.

A day's work is worth a day's pay, in good times and in bad times, and there should be no more bread lines and no soup kitchens.

The nation needs work always. It is ALWAYS BEHIND with roads, canals, irrigation and drainage. The government is always ready to take men into the fighting army and navy, treating and paying them well to do no productive work. It should organize an industrial army, welcome men there at fair wages when work is not to be had elsewhere.

Not all admit that every man is entitled to a living. But it is wise to see to it that he gets it if he is willing to work for it, regardless of his exact RIGHT. It is easier and more comfortable for government to handle great groups of workers than to handle great mobs.

Make your plans now to find work for the unemployed.

Englishmen are borrowing at 7½ per cent. to pay income tax, a new and unpleasant sensation for them. The coal strike, hanging like a black cloud over British industry and the English stock exchange, may begin at any moment. In this country a man who wants money to build a factory and hire men, must pay higher interest than his friends who want money to gamble in stocks. Is that "constructive, patriotic finance?"

Newest Wall street bomb theory brings in a "junk dealer hired to deliver two hundred pounds of dynamite in his junk wagon, containing a lot of scrap iron. Collision with automobile caused dynamite explosion and the scrap iron did the rest."

If any of the great powder companies were found responsible it would have to stand for at least twenty millions, therefore no information will be volunteered involving such responsibility.

Detectives have made no headway, and for a solution the public will have to wait. It may be for years, and it may be forever. One interesting fact develops. It is the business of nobody in particular to protect crowds from reckless handling of explosives.

The Italian general, Alfonso Fusco, aged sixty-three, has entered the priesthood to end his life in kindness and good works. In San Francisco a man aged ninety, having passed counterfeit money, says he did it hoping he would be put in jail, where he would be treated well. Charles the Fifth, greatest ruler of Europe, except Charlemagne and Napoleon, retired to a monastery in his old age, tired of power.

To age and time all men look alike. General, or beggar, or king, the world tires them, and they long for the grave's peace, even before it comes.

Felix M. Warburg seeks to keep Jewish immigration here "within reasonable limits." What are reasonable limits?

The business and industry of this country would be greatly benefited by the arrival of five million more Jews. First, they work for their money, and when they have it they put it to real work in new enterprises. They are not content to sit and do nothing with their money out at interest.

Jerusalem also is regulating immigration. To go there you must have a passport approved by England. And you must prove that you have money enough to last a year. The mere fact that you want to die in Jerusalem won't do.

$500,000 IN STATE FUNDS TIED UP

COSMOPOLITAN TRUST CLOSED

$12,000,000 INVOLVED

The Cosmopolitan Trust Company, Max Mitchell, president, was closed today by order of Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen, tying up more than $12,000,000, of which $500,000 was State funds. The Bank Commissioner declared that he had taken possession because slow loans made by the bank prevented it from meeting continued heavy withdrawals.

Mr. Allen pointed out that from June 30 to September 24 nearly $4,000,000 had been withdrawn from the Cosmopolitan, a situation similar to that which resulted in the closing of the Prudential Trust Company.

The Cosmopolitan is the third institution of its kind to go under, and contained the largest amount of State funds of any of these banks. State Treasurer James Jackson expressed confidence that the money of the Commonwealth was safe.

It was also pointed out that opponents of former State Treasurer Fred J. Burrell charged that he had exceeded the legal limit in deposits with the Cosmopolitan Trust Company. Burrell denied this charge, claiming that he had information that the bank's capitalization had been increased to two million dollars. His advertising agency handled the business of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company.

The bank was closed at 9 a. m., at which time a notice was posted on the doors at No. 60 Devonshire street, reading: "By authority vested in me by law, I hereby take possession of the affairs and business of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company.

(Signed) "JOSEPH C. ALLEN, Bank Commissioner."

The action of the commissioner had been expected for some time, as rumors regarding the bank's solvency had been prevalent since the closing of the Prudential Trust Company.

STONEHAM BLOCK IS RUINED

Two Families Escape in General Alarm Fire Following Two Explosions

Two families were made homeless, and the Symmes Block in Stoneham square was practically destroyed by a general alarm fire started by two explosions of undetermined origin today.

Patrolman Duncan L. McKinnon, who discovered the blaze, was blown into the street by the second explosion. Aid was called from Wakefield, Reading, Woburn, Winchester and Melrose to fight the fire.

Four stores in the building, a three-story wooden structure at Main and Minot streets, were burned out, and the damage was over $50,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bell and their five-year-old daughter, Eleanor, who lived on the third floor in the rear, escaped by a rear stairway after discovering that the front exit was cut off by flames. Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Flagner and his father, Harvey C. Flagner, on the first floor, were awakened by the firemen and made a hurried escape.

Patrolman McKinnon, standing in Stoneham square, heard the first explosion which took place in the Hatch and Hanks bakery. He broke open the door of the bakery, when a second explosion hurled him into the street. The policeman sounded an alarm, as smoke was pouring out of the building, but by the time the firemen arrived the structure was a mass of flames.

BAY STATE MAN SHOOTS WIFE AND STRANGER

Berlin, Mass., Sept. 25.—Finding a stranger in his home when he returned unexpectedly today, Harry Esralian fired two shots, seriously wounding his wife in the thigh and the stranger in the head. Esralian was arrested after a chase in an auto. The man, who works in a local rubber factory, went to work early today. He returned unexpectedly a few minutes later and, the police say, found his wife, formerly a Miss Wilkins of Hudson, with Habib Madnian, 42 years old. The shooting followed.

MacSWINEY ON 44TH DAY

Condition of Cork Lord Mayor Unchanged; Fear Sinn Fein Demonstrations

BULLETIN

London, Sept. 25.—The condition of Terence MacSwiney, hunger-striking Lord Mayor of Cork, was reported unchanged this morning. This was the forty-fourth day of MacSwiney's fast. The reinforcement of guards around Brixton Jail resulted from a tip that Sinn Fein demonstrations were impending.

London, Sept. 25.—An attempt to shoot General Strickland of the British military force in Ireland on a street in Cork failed, according to a dispatch received here. No persons were injured.

BRITISH GREED PERIL TO THE WORLD.

This sentence, from the powerful article in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser by Maximilian Harden, famous editor of Germany, expresses the outcomes of opinion of prominent Germans, of which Harden has the reputation of being the clearest thinker of all. He states fearlessly that England would overturn treaties or go to any limit to gain commercial supremacy.

12 DIE IN RIOT AT TURIN

Nationalists and Socialists at Trieste Fight, Many Being Killed

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 25.—Twelve persons have been killed and 150 wounded in riots at Turin, said a Central News dispatch from Rome today. Serious disorders have broken out at Pola, according to the newspaper Messaggero.

At Trieste, where many persons were recently killed and wounded in fighting between Nationalists and Socialists, a party of Nationalists stormed a ship and threw overboard pictures of Lenine and Trotzky. This was followed by an outbreak of fighting, in which a seaman was shot.

It is reported from Genoa, Turin, Rome and Naples that 90 per cent. of the workers have voted in favor of acceptance of the employers' terms in the dispute between the metal workers and the factory owners.

ALLEGED BASEBALL 'CROOKS' NAMED

Chicago, Sept. 25.—The names of the men charged with "fixing" the 1919 World Series were revealed by implication today by H. H. Brigham, foreman of the Cook County Grand Jury.

While he would not mention them outright, he admitted "the attention of the investigators had been directed to" the following:

Hal Chase, storm centre of the scandal charges, and former first baseman for the White Sox, Yankees, Giants and Reds.

FIX GERMANY'S DEBT AT 416,000,000,000 MARKS

Berlin, Sept. 25.—Finance experts estimate Germany's national debt, including indemnities, at 416,000,000,000 marks instead of 250,000,000,000 marks, as announced by Minister of the Treasury, Wirth, the Tageblatt stated today.

COAL

The Anthracite miners have gone back to work and today are producing coal in about normal quantity. The transportation lines, both rail and water, are also in normal working order.

If these conditions continue we believe that the present shortage of anthracite coal in Greater Boston will be a temporary one.

The Governor has acted wisely in appointing Mr. Eugene C. Hultman, a very able and experienced business man, as Fuel Administrator, and the Public Interests will be well cared for under his supervision.

Meanwhile the wise restriction on distribution issued yesterday by the Fuel Administrator not only prevents a panic, but also causes the coal now on hand to be distributed fairly throughout the district so that each consumer may receive some coal which will meet his needs until larger supplies are received and his full order can be delivered.

We will give the best service that conditions will allow, and fully expect that all those who rely on us for supplies will be amply taken care of before actual winter weather arrives.

SLAUGHTER OF IRISH KEPT FROM BRITISH PUBLIC.

"The worst conceivable of all news from Ireland keeps the English public ignorant of actual conditions existing there," declares a correspondent writing of the suppression of newspapers adopted by the imperial government. This article in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser is one of the many enlightening messages that come to the American people that the English themselves cannot get.

PRINCE TO MARRY BACK BAY GIRL.

Prince Customsins of Russia, now a student at Harvard, has won the daughter of one of Boston's best families. The young Russian, great grandson of General Grant, did not find it so difficult to become infatuated with a typical Yankee girl, and the story of the romance in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser is as interesting as the famous Rand-Anderson union of the most prominent in his own family.

THE BURGLAR'S SUNDAY SCHOOL BRIDE.

Any combination of man and woman may make a romance, but the very good little girl who eloped with the very bad young man, as told in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser Magazine Section, is of the unusual sort, and the logical ending of the honeymoon was no more nor less than passed have been expected.

BACK TO THE LOVER OF HER GIRLHOOD.

Tomorrow's the pampered pet of the fun-loving crowd, the toast of the town, the petted French capitalist—all the successful but delighted her heart—and has returned to the native land to marry the poor writer of girlhood. The unusual series of this romance throughout beauty is described in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser.

COAL USERS DEMAND PRICES BE FORCED DOWN

TRADE SCANDAL SEEN IN THE PRESENT SITUATION

Comparative Coal Prices

The following shows comparative coal prices in three cities:

BOSTON		BROCKTON		NEW YORK
Stove	$16 ton	Stove	$19.05 to $21	Stove	$14.85
Nut	$16 ton	Egg	$19.05 to $21	Nut	$14.85
Egg	$16 ton	Nut	$19.05 to $21	Egg	$14.50
Broken	$16 ton	Broken	$18.70	Broken	$14.50

Retail prices charged for hard coal in Massachusetts are looked upon by consumers as a trade scandal, according to disclosures today. Investigation of the hard coal situation showed that the retail cost of the brands used in family ranges and furnaces is as big an economic problem as the coal scarcity, in the opinion of the consumers.

Householders demand that prices be revised downward by the special coal committee appointed by Governor Coolidge. They contend that a standard maximum price, which will allow fair profits to retailers, is as urgent as increasing the anthracite supply. State Fuel Administrator Eugene C Hultman admits that he isn't bothering his head about coal prices just now. He says he is most anxious to procure a normal supply of hard coal.

CHARGE PROFITEERING.

Housekeepers agree with Administrator Hultman about relieving the hard coal famine, but claim he erred in ignoring the serious price discrepancies that prevail throughout the State, which they say arouse public suspicion that somewhere, between the mines and the family cellbins, there is profiteering. Dealers admit profiteering, but lay it to the operatives. They say dealers are getting much smaller margins of profits than the public suspect.

Hard coal is selling from $1.15 to $1.50 a ton less in New York than in Boston, and several dollars cheaper than in many Massachusetts communities. In Brockton and Haverhill and environs family coal is bringing as much as $21 to $23 a ton, and dealers claim such prices are compulsory when hard coal is bought by them at the mines for $15.50 and $16 a ton.

CALL FOR PROBE.

From the standpoint of the consumer there is difficulty in determining whether the exorbitant prices are actually due to excessive special purchase rates at the mines or to trade camouflage and graft, as alleged by the public. That is an element which the special coal committee should carefully probe, say consumers.

It is no longer a trade secret that many retailers, especially those in the smaller communities, would not buy too liberally of hard coal under the present conditions, even if they could get it, because of the danger of a sudden tumble in retail prices, which would result in heavy financial loss.

George Clarence Holmes of the "This is Holmes" Corporation, No. 58 Main street, Brockton, today admitted he had been afraid to buy too heavily owing to the precarious condition of the market, but that there is little danger of a slump even if dealers wished to stock up to capacity. He said dealers were up against it hard, adding:

BROCKTON SUPPLY LOW.

"I have been in the coal business forty-seven years. The anthracite supply is terribly low at present. Never saw it worse. Dealers can't buy and others wouldn't buy too recklessly if they could and I have felt that way about it. There is scarcely any anthracite in Brockton. I am charging $19.05 a ton for nut, stove and egg and $18.70 for broken. It has sold around this region as high as $21 and $22 a ton, but the dealers who charge that rate were compelled to buy from independent operatives at the mines and paid $16 a ton for it. To this they were forced to add $5.40 in freight tariff, 14 cents war tax and still more for labor. I followed them. Labor is awfully high right now.

"I know a dealer who placed ordered thirty car loads at $15 a ton from a small operative where the output has not been more than three cars a day and nobody can predict what he gets. That's the chance you take in such desperate buying. I heard of a man today who bought two tons of pea coal somewhere and later telephoned and asked the dealer if he could sell him some coal to burn with those two tons of pea coal he bought.

FAMINE ON CAPE COD.

"I have orders from some 1,200 customers on file with an aggregate demand of from 5,000 to 6,000 tons. I beat the State out on the ration plan. A couple of weeks ago I allowed them only a fair percentage of what they ordered in the attempt to serve all possible under the present scarcity of supply. I feel that the Governor's action in appointing a committee will straighten out matters in time."

Inquiry today showed that points supplied by the New Haven railroad were suffering the most acute shortages in New England. That account for the hard coal famine along Cape Cod. During the months of July and August an embargo was placed on the New Haven Railroad. Under the priority clause this road was allowed to handle soft coal, but no anthracite. Then just as the embargo was lifted the miners went on their two weeks' "vacation" and returned to the mines early this week. Friction between the New Haven and Pennsylvania Railroad also delayed hard coal shipments, it is alleged. Members of the Governor's coal committee admitted this, but said that tangle had been cleared away some days ago.

Fuel Administrator to See That Cars Are Provided

Fuel Administrator Eugene C Hultman has notified the presidents of coal companies shipping fuel into Massachusetts that he expects them to make every effort to relieve the coal shortage in this State.

Mr. Hultman, in taking this action, promised to see to it that transportation facilities would be provided. It appears that in the past the companies have refrained from sending coal into this section because of the difficulty in shipping it over the local lines.

"I have assured them if coal is sent there will be no embargo to hold it up," said Mr. Hultman. "It will be up to the dealers who receive the fuel to see to it that it is unloaded. I have been promised by the Mayors of a number of cities that municipal laborers will be employed in this work if necessary."

Mr. Hultman also notified the heads of the out-of-State railroads shipping coal into this section that the lines operating here will be able to cooperate with them in the transportation of fuel. He assured them that the New England railroads would not be allowed to establish an embargo without his consent.

Benjamin Campbell, vice-president of the New Haven road, is now in New York seeing to it that a continuous system of transportation is in operation between the coal fields and the cities and towns here.

Providence Mayor Plans to Ration Coal Supply

Providence, Sept. 25.—Retail coal dealers met with Mayor Gaynor here and agreed to work with a committee appointed by him with the view of relieving the present shortage of coal, it was said.

It is the purpose of Mayor Gaynor to ration coal so that applicants will receive a small quantity and those who have a good supply will not receive more until there is a threat of it. It will also be the duty of the committee to see that orders are not duplicated. The dealers said that a normal supply would probably not reach this city until November.

MALDEN BOY HIT BY AUTO TRUCK

Joseph Uno, aged six, of No. 184 Adams street, Malden, was slightly injured when he was struck by an auto truck as he stepped from the curbstone. Charles street in front of the machine.

William Howe, of No. 23 Glenwood street, Roxbury, the driver, turned the truck into the curbstone and brought it to a stop when he saw the boy's danger.

WOULD BAR PARADE OF BATHERS IN NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., Sept. 25.—The Newport Improvement Association, composed mostly of Summer residents, has requested the Board of Aldermen to pass an ordinance prohibiting people walking along the streets in the vicinity of the beach in "inappropriate bathing attire," or, in fact, in bathing costume of any kind.

Prices Coming Down

Washington, Sept. 25.—Fresh vegetables are cheaper today in Washington than for three years. Sugar and potatoes have declined substantially, but butter, eggs and milk continue at high levels. Clothing prices have shown mild recessions.

Boston grocers reduced prices on Cuban and Porto Rican grades of sugar to 15 cents today. Other grades were lowered to 16 and 17 cents. Indications point to still lower prices.

Cleveland, Sept. 25.—The Cleveland Worsted Mills Company has announced a reduction of 15 to 30 per cent. in the price of woolens, giving the lower cost of raw material as the reason.

Elkhart, Ind., Sept. 25.—Prices of all model automobiles of the Crow-Elkhart Motor Corporation have been reduced to pre-war figures. General conditions in the industry make it possible, it was stated.

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Following the lead of Henry Ford, one of the largest lumber firms here has announced a reduction of 20 per cent. in prices to the retail trade.

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—All Canadian sugar refineries have made substantial reductions in their prices of all grades of sugar at wholesale to take effect on Monday next.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Nation-wide demand for lower prices smashed wheat futures down 12¾ cents a bushel here and nearly demoralized the market.

New York, Sept. 25.—The prices of soft collars will drop from 10 to 30 per cent. on October 7, according to Elmore Leffingwell, New York representative of one of the largest collar manufacturers in the country.

WANTS FACTS OF CHECK FOR COX

Senate "Slush Fund" Committee Sends Telegraphic Subpoena for Dayton Banker

Washington, Sept. 25.—The Senate committee investigating campaign contributions made a spectacular move today when it issued a telegraphic subpoena for W. E. Talbot, a banker of Dayton, O. He will be asked to detail the circumstances under which the Dayton Metals Products Company, with its check paid off a note signed by Governor Cox and held by the City National Bank, of which Mr. Talbot is president, during the campaign of 1918.

This alleged transaction was brought to light before the committee by a witness, George H. Lockwood, editor of the National Republican. "If the Senate is looking for leads, said Mr. Lockwood, "I will give it one.

"I would like to cite check number 12,241 of the Dayton Metal Products Company of Dayton, O., dated June 29, 1918. Ostensibly this was a payment by a holding corporation of the various aircraft concerns in Dayton to pay off a note of Governor James M. Cox. The effort was made to have it appear that this was an obligation Mr. Cox had incurred with the City National Bank of Dayton some time before, but from surrounding circumstances it appears it must have been a contribution from this corporation to Mr. Cox's campaign fund."

"Are you testifying to something you know, or what someone told you?" demanded Senator Reed, aroused by a possible violation of law which prohibits campaign contributions from corporations.

"I will guarantee to produce the facts if the witnesses are called," replied Lockwood.

CLOSING OF BANK HITS PAYROLLS

Many Workers Forced to Wait for Money by Action on Cosmopolitan Trust

City Treasurer T. W. Murray closed the city's account of $5,000 with the Cosmopolitan about the middle of September.

State Treasurer James Jackson issued the following statement in connection with the closing of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company:

"There is no deposit in the Cosmopolitan Trust Company, $500,000 of the state's money. There is every reason to suppose that it is absolutely safe. It will be tied up for a short time, but there is no reason for anyone to be disturbed about it."

The capital of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company was $2,000,000. Under the law the State is permitted to have an amount equivalent to 40 per cent. of a bank's capitalization on deposit with that institution. On that basis the State could have legally had $800,000 of its money with the Cosmopolitan.

State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook said that the State had $600,000 with the bank on August 21, when he began an audit of the affairs of State Treasurer Burrell. Opponents of Burrell charged at that time that he had exceeded the legal limit in deposits with the Cosmopolitan Trust.

BURRELL HANDLED PUBLICITY.

Burrell, who also handled the Cosmopolitan's advertising through his private agency, said that he did not know that he had gone beyond the limit in depositing the State's money in that bank.

He declared that he had information that the Cosmopolitan's capitalization had been increased to two million dollars. His opponents contended that he had no right to increase the deposit there until he had been officially notified by the commissioner of corporations that the new capital stock had been paid in. Burrell replied that he had every assurance that it had.

The question was one to be investigated by the committee of five legislators appointed by Governor Coolidge. When Burrell resigned the public hearings of the committee closed and the issue about the Cosmopolitan Trust Company was left unsettled.

STATE KNEW OF RUN.

A prominent State official who asked that his name be withheld said today:

"There has been a run on the Cosmopolitan Trust Company since the closing of the Hanover Trust Company," he said, "is another result of the Ponzi affair which caused people to have a feeling of apprehension.

"The State believes its deposit in the Cosmopolitan Trust Company to be safe until there is the last lone dollar. That being so all depositors will get their money back in full, because the State is a common depositor and is treated the same as all others. The State's money was on deposit at the time it was being made on the Cosmopolitan Trust Company and that every effort was being made by the bank people to avert the catastrophe."

IN DISTRESS FRIDAY.

The bank closed yesterday the bank officials were making strenuous efforts to get enough money to tide them over the run, but could not get it. The run was unable to convert their securities into cash.

"The State could have precipitated the crash at any time by withdrawing the State deposit."

Bank Commissioner Allen issued the following statement:

"The Cosmopolitan Trust Company was closed because of slow loans and inability to meet continued withdrawals of deposits. The total deposits of the bank were as follows on the dates given:

June 30	$16,771,000
September 15	15,019,000
September 15	14,163,000
September 20	13,447,000
September 23	12,295,000
September 24	12,941,000

COULDN'T STOP OUTGO.

"With loans which could not be converted into cash when needed, the bank was unable to meet the steady and continued withdrawals of deposits and the public for the commissioner to take possession.

"No other bank or trust company is involved in any way in the closing of the Cosmopolitan."

George H. Rich, former treasurer of the Cosmopolitan, stated today that he had severed his connection on the first of August. George F. Kinsman is acting treasurer.

EXTENSIVELY ADVERTISED.

The bank recently opened a trust department to handle estates, and had engaged in an extensive advertising campaign, announcing its safety and extensive foreign connections.

On September 11 a public advertisement set forth that Morris J. Rahmovitx had been sent to Danzig and Poland, to sail on September 22, for the purpose of co-operating with the bank's representative at Warsaw in distributing financial assistance sent by the patrons to friends and relatives.

The officers, in addition to Max Mitchell, are Silas Peirce, Patrick F. O'Keefe and Richard Pinkson, vice-presidents; George M. Fisher, cashier; George P. Kinsman, assistant cashier; Frank G. Howard, secretary, and S. Atkins, assistant secretary. The directors are Lasser Agoos, Patrick B. Buckley, Roger D. Mc D., Edward O. Donnelly, Michael J. Jordan, Patrick B. Monrane, Max Mitchell, Patrick F. O'Keefe, Raymond H. Dyeson, Silas Peirce, Hiram J. Potter, Benjamin A. Frazer, Gabriel Siabile and Simon Vorenburg.

SECURITY NOT STRONG.

It was pointed out that many of the local banks have been accustomed to make large loans at exhorbitant rates of interest, many times with little or no security. It was recalled that at the time Richard C. Cox, so-called millionaire real estate operator of Cambridge, was in financial difficulties, it was learned that he had been borrowing large sums.

While President Max Mitchell of the Cosmopolitan claimed that Cox did not own them any money, two attachments for $50,000 each were recorded as having been placed on the Cambridge man's property by the legal representatives of the trust company.

These attachments, it was said, were to cover a loan of $40,000 made by the bank to Cox. The story of this loan, as told a reporter, was to the effect that Cox went to the bank and attempted to borrow the money without success. He then asked if the loan would be made provided a deposit of $75,000 was made with the bank by another man. The reply was "yes."

The following day, according to the story, a certain well known Boston man opened an account with the Cosmopolitan, depositing $75,000. There were no strings on the deposit, and the name of Cox was not mentioned. No guarantee of any kind were given by the depositor, and yet the following day Cox was said to have secured his money.

AFTER WEEKLY PAYROLLS.

A large crowd congregated in front of the bank, and everyone passing stopped to take a glimpse through the windows. Officers from the City Hall Avenue police station kept the crowd of curious moving. For the most part, the crowd was a good natured one, although here and there could be seen a woman with tear-dimmed eyes and anxious visage.

CLOTHING MANUFACTURERS WANT WAGE REVISION

New York, Sept. 25.—The New York Clothing Manufacturers' Association has adopted proposals for presentations to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, calling for a general revision of working and wage agreements necessitated by business depression and a prediction of lower prices.

Counter proposals will probably be made by the Union and the points in dispute submitted to arbitration.

HOSEMAN DONOVAN IS MADE LIEUTENANT

Hoseman John M. Donovan of No. 20 Oakview terrace, Roxbury, attached to Engine Co. 28-35, has been promoted to lieutenant with increase of salary from $1,800 to $2,000. It was announced by the Mayor's office. He fills the vacancy caused by the promotion of Lieutenant Frederick R. Brophy.

Two retirements with the approval of Mayor Peters are also announced. They are Ladderman Michael Ryan of Ladder Co. 19, at $1800 per year, and Hoseman James Collins of Engine Co. 49, at $900.

She says the father is a veteran of the World War. He has left for parts unknown, she says.

CALL TAXI FARES EXORBITANT

Striking Drivers Say Charges by Local Companies Are Highest in Country

That taxi fares in Boston are the highest in the country is the assertion of Local No. 126, Auto Livery Chauffeurs, 600 of whose members are on strike for a nine-hour day, one day off in fifteen and a wage increase of $1.40 a day with 75 cents an hour overtime.

The men have been receiving $2.80 per day or $21.60 a week, which they claim is insufficient for them to live on because of the present high cost of living. The concerns affected by the strike are the Town Taxi, Taxi Service, Armstrong Transfer, Fenway Taxi Company and Cummings Brothers of Charlestown.

FARES UP 50 PER CENT.

According to union officials a request was made of the management of each taxi company for a wage increase September 1, which was refused. On May 1 the taxi companies received an increase of 50 per cent. on their night fares and 200 per cent. on their extras.

A statement issued by Local No. 126 calls attention to this fact and cites the following case:

"A man and two women, with three children, left the end of one cab at the Somerset Hotel. He also had a small steamer trunk; his fare before he even started was $2 on the meter. On his arrival at the Back Bay station the meter showed $3.40, which he paid with protest, for which he could not be blamed. In this instance the company received $3.40 for the distance of one mile. This is only one of many cases."

RECEIVE NO COMMISSIONS.

Referring to the taxi companies' profits, the union statement points out that they are making money on a basis of thirty-five cents per mile.

The taxi drivers declare they receive no commission from the amount of business they do.

"We are willing to lay our case before the State Board of Arbitration to show our fairness in the matter," says the union in its statement. "The taxi companies have always opposed going before the State board for fear the public would learn that they could well pay us more than the small and ridiculous amount of $21 a week they are paying us at present."

According to the strikers, milk drivers, carmen and others are receiving just double what they are getting.

GET NO SICK BENEFIT.

"If we are out ill a day we have to stand the loss of our pay, and if we are sick or hurt in the line of our duty we receive no pay or compensation," continues the statement.

"Compare our work with other trades and the responsible and hazardous is the work of the taxi driver. All day we are in the thick of traffic, trying to perform our duties to the best of our ability, and as efficiently as possible."

CHILD IS KILLED BY AUTO IN PROVIDENCE

Providence, Sept. 25. — Lena Bernhardt, aged three, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Bernhardt, of Jacksonville, Fla., was fatally injured when struck by an automobile operated by Sarkis Sarkisian, of No. 61 Candace street, on Chalkstone avenue.

Witnesses say that Sarkisian was on the wrong side of the road and was driving rapidly. He was held on a charge of manslaughter. Three men who were in the machine with Sarkisian disappeared after the accident. The girl and her parents were visiting friends here.

WORCESTER POLICEMEN WANT $1 A DAY MORE

Worcester, Sept. 25.—Worcester policemen have just filed a petition asking for salary increases of $1 per day for all grades in the department. It is expected that the firemen will file a similar petition in time for consideration by the city council at its meeting Monday night. The men are now receiving $5 per day.

WIDOW PROPOSED TRIAL MARRIAGE, COL. FRENCH TESTIFIES

ADMITS HE SENT HER FLOWERS

Defendant Says Mrs. Howard Showed Him Attentions the First Time They Met

Portland, Me., Sept. 25.—A trial marriage of three weeks was proposed to her by Mrs. Genevieve Howard of Boston, Colonel Milton H. French of Thomaston testified in the $50,000 breach of promise suit against him just before the case was given to a jury in the United States District Court.

Judge Clarence Hale instructed the jurors to return a sealed verdict, which was to have been read in open court today.

Colonel French said that Mrs. Howard introduced herself to him while he was stopping at a Boston hotel and declared that she told him then that he was the only man she had met in her life who appealed to her. Counsel for the defendant accused Mrs. Howard of laying plans to "land him."

Mrs. Howard, a reader of national reputation, who has appeared at schools, colleges and universities throughout the country, and who testified that she had made $5,000 a year through her engagements until Colonel French broke off their alleged betrothal, introduced about twenty-five letters from the defendant.

LOVE LETTERS READ.

These were read by her attorney, Edward Burnett of Plymouth, Mass. One of them was replete with endearing terms, but the others were couched for the most part in commonplaces.

Mrs. Howard has a Summer home at Provincetown, Mass., and Colonel French's visits to this place were frequently mentioned.

During emphatically that he had ever promised to wed her, Col. French declared that Mrs. Howard had suggested a trial marriage for three weeks, explaining that actors and public men and women had tried marriages. He said that he ridiculed the idea.

"She told me that I was the one man she had seen in her life who appealed to her, and that she was ready to love with me," testified Mrs. Howard.

That he had ever used the expression, "Oh, my God, Genevieve, I can't live without you," was denied by the defendant, who claimed that he had never introduced the subject of marriage, but that she frequently referred to it.

OBJECTED TO LOVE TALK.

"She said to me that she had told her friends that she was madly in love with me," said Col. French, "and I saw no object in making such statements about her love for me."

How they frequently took breakfast together at the Oxford Hotel in Boston, where he first met Mrs. Howard in January, 1917, and how he often visited her apartment, was related by the witness. He said, however, that he was always the gentleman, that Mrs. Howard would often call his room up in the morning and ask if he were ready for breakfast. She preferred to break fast with him rather than her son Stanley, because the latter was "so disagreeable," he testified.

"The woman was pursuing Colonel French for a year and ten months," declared Attorney E. Littlefield of Rockland, in opening for the defense. "He never had any intention of marrying her, and always told her so.

"He was drinking when at the hotel Oxford and probably did get mushy. This woman was trying to land him."

Husband of Heiress Is Called Gem Thief

Mrs. John D. Spreckels, Jr., who says Captain William N. Barrett, husband of Alice Drexel, stole her diamonds and pearls.

Los Angeles, Sept. 25.—Captain William N. Barrett, the fascinating soldier of fortune who a year ago eloped with the wealthy Alice Gordon Drexel of Philadelphia, has literally "talked himself out of jail" here.

Held on a tentative charge of stealing a priceless pearl necklace from Mrs. John D. Spreckels, Jr., wealthy California woman now in London, he has convinced the police it was all a mistake. They have declared him free to go where he will.

Word of the alleged theft of the necklace came from London, where Mrs. Spreckels still is, and where Captain Barrett was with her a few months ago. It was said a warrant for his arrest was out and that he had fled to Mexico.

Barrett said he did not steal the necklace, but Mrs. Spreckels sold it. He was present when the sale took place.

He further denied newspaper reports that he deserted his wealthy wife and baby in England, and that their home was permanently separated.

He admitted living here under aliases. He also admitted that in 1904 he was known as "Diamond Bill."

NEW STREET CONTRACTS APPROVED BY MAYOR

Mayor Peters has approved the following contracts of the Public Works Department: For laying brick block pavement in Mount Vernon street, from Bay to West Cedar streets, to John W. O'Connell, at $28,521; to resurface Poplar street, from Beech to Hyde Park line with asphalt macadam, by the use of division forces, at estimated cost of $13,000; to resurface Western avenue, from Waverly street to North Harvard street and repair macadam road between North Harvard street and bridge, with division forces, at $7,000.

BAY STATE MEN GIVEN COMMISSIONS IN ARMY

Washington, Sept. 25.—Announcement is made by the War Department that commissions have been given the following: Bernard J. Finan, Natick, first lieutenant, Q. M. Corps; Joseph M. Matson, Boston, first lieutenant Q. M. Corps; Charles W. Wood, army supply base, Boston, first lieutenant Q. M. Corps; W. E. Bowler, Spencer, first lieutenant Engineer Corps; Leander N. Tramelli, Canal Devens, first lieutenant infantry; Walter J. Ungethuem, Camp Devens, first lieutenant infantry.

RODGERS CONFIDENT OF HIS ACQUITTAL

Though Charles H. Rodgers is confined at the Charles street jail awaiting a hearing on the charge of murdering his stepdaughter, Dorothy Rodgers, the investigation into the death has not been completed. John Scheele, attorney for Rodgers, claims he can introduce a third person into the case. Rodgers, who formerly lived at No. 38 Upton street, Cambridge, and not Upton street, South End, is confident of acquittal. He claims a perfect alibi.

GIRLS ACCUSED OF THEFT JUMP BAIL

Dorothy Lydon and Mary Smith, who were arrested, charged with robbing Walter G. McLehnney in a South End doorway a few nights ago, failed to appear in the Municipal Court on a continuance of their case. Each had been held in $1,000 bonds furnished by Mrs. Bessie Popkins of Shawmut avenue. Warrants for their arrests were issued again.

DINNER PAILS RULE CHICAGO

Everyone Carrying Lunch and Restaurants Being Forced to Revise Prices

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Chicago restaurants will revise their prices downward in a few days. Nothing altruistic on their part, but the result of a city-wide revival of the old dinner pail.

Great numbers are carrying their lunches these days. It's all the fad. Shop girls and business men alike have joined the protest against gouging on food prices.

City officials are backing the protest.

"They will either bring their prices down or we will keep after them until they do," was the ultimatum Alderman Max Adamowski, chairman of the council high cost of living committee.

"The La Salle Hotel has already agreed to reduce its prices," Adamowski continued. "Others I believe will do the same. As soon as we get the wagon started down hill all the restaurant keepers in town will follow suit."

"Wholesale prices in practically all groceries have dropped materially, and we are going to see that retail prices do the same.

"The committee is without the right of subpoena, but promises to 'make it warm' for all restaurant men who do not respond to their summons.

"And while the council committee does its work, everyone carrying lunches from home. The movement has only been on for a few days, but, backed by the press, it is becoming general."

COL. MURPHY TO WED SOUTH NATICK GIRL

Colonel John D. Murphy of Natick, commander of the 103d Field Artillery, Massachusetts National Guard, and Miss Jane Keenan Diehl of No. 34 Lincoln street, South Natick, will be married on Saturday, October 2. Invitations for the marriage reception at South Natick are now out.

Colonel Murphy is engaged in the shoe manufacturing business. He is the son of Major Daniel J. Murphy, well known shoe manufacturer and formerly prominent in State politics. Miss Diehl is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Diehl of South Natick and is a graduate of the class of 1916 at Wellesley.

POLES SLAYING JEWS IN RECONQUERED TOWNS

Paris, Sept. 25.—The French newspaper populaire declares that the Polish troops that have reoccupied the towns evacuated by the Russians are carrying out pitiless campaigns against the Jews, involving murder and attacks on women.

The towns in which pogroms have already been carried or are in progress are Grodno, Minsk, Mestovisch, Sledlce, Wynaskow, Divock, Bialystok and Plock.

OLD CHELSEA CARBARN TO BE A REPAIR SHOP

The Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company has made plans for remodelling the Washington avenue carbarn in Chelsea into a big repair shop giving employment to 200 or more skilled mechanics. The cars now in that carbarn were transferred today to the Broadway carhouse.

BUYING ON SANE BASIS IN U. S.

Business Expert Expects Long Drawn-Out Readjustment of Business Conditions

Washington, Sept. 25.—Good business is forecast for the remainder of the year throughout the country by Archer Wallis Douglas, chairman of the committee on statistics and standards of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

While conservatism and caution seems to be the keynote of business everywhere, says Mr. Douglas, there is no evidence of apprehension except in a few unimportant quarters. Mr. Douglas declares that the peak of high prices is past, and that he looks to a gradual but not somewhat painless readjustment. Purchasing is liberal enough, but on a sane and sober basis, says his report.

About 60 per cent. of the whole country says Mr. Douglas, is enjoying business described as "good." On the Pacific coast conditions are favorable, he says. In the State of California, the decline in shipbuilding, which is general in all the rest of the country, and the lack of cars to move lumber. The report says:

"In California, the citrus industry is the brightest spot. Eastward the mountain States have learned not to rely solely upon sheep. The flocks and cattle for everywhere in the United States for the past year is low and demand has almost ceased.

NOT PROFITABLE.

"Nor is the cattle situation much better. It is true that the flocks and herds are generally in good condition because of sufficient rainfall, but prices are low and unremunerative at present high prices.

"Throughout the Great Plains States are about evenly divided between fair and good. In the North-west Spring wheat did not fulfill its early promise, but it is still a good yield and in some sections, a very good one. Several there was an abundant harvest and plenty of good food for both man and beast. There will be more flax than last year, more sugar beets, large crops of corn, and much promise of hay and forage.

"A prospect for cotton is made uncertain in Texas and Oklahoma by damage by boll weevil. Only in Arizona and California is the yield considerably larger than last year. There seems the strong likelihood of a crop equal to all our needs and a liberal amount left for export.

"Coal mining in the Great Plains States is full of troubles. Often there is the weariest some story of constant and apparently unnecessary delays. Iron mining in Michigan and Wisconsin is well employed.

"Car shortage is felt between the Ohio river and the Great Lakes, the Mississippi river and the Allegheny mountains in excellent shape. The crops are very good.

LESSENED OUTPUT.

"Industrial life is very busy. A flood has appeared in the automobile horizon. It seems to presage very definitely lessened production in the near future and curtailment of work and more economical methods of distribution. Building materials is full of business. The demand for concrete roads is making cement and gravel hard to get. Lime is obtainable. Lots of tobacco is being grown in the Central West and in the South.

"In the South the traveler sees flocks and herds and fields of grain in contrast to the desolation of a few years ago. Industrial life is very active, save in textiles where lessened output and some shutdowns are noted.

"This same condition prevails all along the Atlantic seaboard into New England. Textiles are hard hit and some of the manufacturers of leather. Furniture making is good. Manufacturing in general is good throughout the Middle States and New England. This is true likewise of crops in these sections."

The Cunard steamship Valacia is loading 104,686 bushels of grain, 125 barrels of evaporated milk, a quantity of soap stock, furniture, general merchandise and fifty tons of medicine for the Red Cross to England. The Valacia was torpedoed by the Germans and was returned to the service.

Duel With Rapiers in 'Village' Is Arranged

New York, Sept. 25.—The halycon days when gallant knights went blithely to their deaths fighting for their ladies' honor, have been revived, and in no less mundane a spot than this bustling city.

A duel (with rapiers) to be fought for the fair name of a woman was arranged in Greenwich Village, the home of so-called Bohemia, where conventions are not.

The challenge was passed and accepted in the delightfully courteous manner that prevailed when baron had their morals, and lack of politeness was considered a heinous offence.

The participants in the affair d'honneur are Nicholas Murray, artist and photographer, late of Paris, and Alfredo Spiotta, an unidentified Frenchman whose name is shrouded in secrecy. The duel will be fought at fair one also is jealously guarded.

According to what facts have been secured, M. Murray has a studio there at No. 123 MacDougal street, was supping with a young lady of the studio in a restaurant fronting Sheridan square, half a block from the Greenwich Village Theatre. A remark was made, an insulting remark, which was immediately returned by a blow administered by one of the man who made it.

"I accept your challenge," said the man who had been struck. "Shall it be with swords? We are both swordsmen."

"As you like," returned M. Murray courteously, clicking his heels together and bowing from the waist from the hips. The duel was arranged for seconds were appointed and the principals left, smiling.

THREE MEN INJURED IN MALDEN RUNAWAY

Pearl V. Foote, a grocer at No. 522 Broadway, Malden, George Doherty, of No. 9 School street, Dorchester, and John Wiley of No. 317 Salem street, Malden, received slight injuries when they were thrown from a wagon on Salem street, near Maplewood square, after the horse became frightened and started on a mad dash. Foote attempted to stop the horse and was thrown from his feet after making a daring leap. The other two injured persons were thrown from the back of the wagon when it struck a curbstone.

Is Marriage a Success?

By ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE,
Famous novelist, author of "Uneasy Street," best selling novel of the year.

The Boston American wishes me to answer the question, "Is Marriage a Success?" Boston-bred, I stand upon the ancient privilege of the New Englander—to answer with a question. And so I reply:

"Why should it be?"

Is eating a success? Is sleeping a success? Is breathing a success? If the purpose of eating, sleeping and breathing in life in the human body, then these are successes. And if the purpose of marriage is to breed children, then marriage is successful. And infinitely more successful from a breeding standpoint than the haphazard introduction of children into the world that would occur if marriage were done away with. Do away with marriage, and one does away with parental responsibility. Substitute a state responsibility for the parental, and one proceeds inevitably, in time, a race of serfs.

PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS.

But if marriage stands for more than the method whereby race continuance is assured, the question of its success involves a definition of the word. We all know what we mean when we speak of a successful financier, or politician, or soldier, or lawyer, or author, or artist.

But when we speak of a successful marriage, do we mean that the parties have been fruitful? Certainly not. Do we mean that the couple are happy? Obviously, we mean both.

Now the world, since the beginning, has sought for happiness. As chemist, I am familiar with the thing that might be unearthed by a pick-axe, or discovered by the mixing in some chemist's laboratory of the contents of one tube with the contents of another, who has learned to content himself for that, thing whose ingredients are locked within his own heart.

We do not know the meaning of Truth. When that is known to us, we shall be as gods. One elementary principle, however, we have learned. Truth necessarily is simple, is obvious. It might be stated that it is axiomatic that that which is incapable of simple presentation cannot be Truth.

If it is simple, so almost-obvious then, why does not man see it? For he is simple. Only his seeker after a blessing document looks always in the inaccessible. He passes over what is right in front of him. Intellectually, man has grown since the long-ago age that produced him in his own mind mentally that he cannot see what lies at his feet? Does he not grow backwards, at any rate, against anyone.

There is no philosopher's stone to Truth or Truth's synonym, Happiness. Yet, as I approach forty and cast aside, one by one, the rash assumptions of youth, as I realize that I am not as omniscient as I was at nineteen, I begin to see the key to that thing which is locked in my heart may not be contained in one word, but in one "open, Sesame," which unlocked Ali Baba's Cave—Contentment.

If one, realising that perfection is unattainable, should strive for something that is within his reach, if, in the ergot of the day, took "fifty-fifty" as one's motto, and always strove to be content to accept twenty-five, might not a great measure of the unattainable be attained? Might one not know if he achieved perfection?

But, until the unattainable has come to man, until he knows Truth and is as a god, I can answer the question that the Boston Globe asks only as I have answered it before.

Why should it be?

Howard Chandler Christy, the famous artist, will discuss "Is Marriage a Success," in the American Monday.

Opinions of Readers Are Invited

What do you think? Readers of the American are invited to discuss the question in this newspaper. Write frankly, briefly and truthfully what you have to say in answer to the question, "Is Marriage a Success?" If you think it not altogether a success, do not fail to suggest what you think is the remedy, what is the trouble and what could be done. Write in your opinions, experiences and suggestions. Write frankly and fearlessly—your confidence will be respected. No names of writers published except with the writer's consent.

Address your contributions to MARRIAGE EDITOR, Boston American, Boston.

If marriage in a spiritual union, the parties to that union must be spiritually equipped. If marriage is to be successful. Conscious that the truth is unknown to any one of us, that without it true happiness cannot be achieved, are we not more presumptuous than any little boy playing with the hammer and saw, when we expect that marriage should be successful?

Why should it be?

Does one who has never seen the water teach another to swim? Can one imperfect being as complement to the imperfection of another that perfection remains?

IS GENEROSITY THE KEY?

One may hope, one may strive, and that is all. But to expect that marriage should be any more successful than, let us say, self-government of peoples, that it should approach more nearly perfection than any other human relationship, is to advance toward the mysteries insolently.

Yet, you say, you have seen happy marriages. So have I. There is none, I believe, more happy than my own. Yet would it be to assume that I had achieved the ultimate of happiness. Would I profess myself superhuman, as well as believing that Mrs. Roche is a goddess. The former I cannot do in justice to myself, although the latter is my firm conviction and I find no cause to say where, at any time, against anyone.

There is no philosopher's stone to Truth or Truth's synonym, Happiness. Yet, as I approach forty and cast aside, one by one, the rash assumptions of youth, as I realize that I am not as omniscient as I was at nineteen, I begin to see the key to that thing which is locked in my heart may not be contained in one word, but in one "open, Sesame," which unlocked Ali Baba's Cave—Contentment.

If one, realising that perfection is unattainable, should strive for something that is within his reach, if, in the ergot of the day, took "fifty-fifty" as one's motto, and always strove to be content to accept twenty-five, might not a great measure of the unattainable be attained? Might one not know if he achieved perfection?

But, until the unattainable has come to man, until he knows Truth and is as a god, I can answer the question that the Boston Globe asks only as I have answered it before.

SEIZE WHISKEY AND CLARET

Agents Get 800 Quarts in Raid on Providence Garage; Truck Drivers Arrested

Providence, R. I., Sept. 25.—Eight hundred quarts of whiskey and seventy-five gallons of California claret were confiscated in two spectacular seizures by prohibition agents.

The whiskey was found in a garage in the rear of 1,000 Quincy street. It is valued at $12,000.

There were no arrests in the several persons use the garage and none would admit possession.

The claret was taken from a truck in Cranston. Luigi Cristi and Giovanni Christopho of Johnston, in charge of the truck, were arrested.

MANY FEATURES AT LEXINGTON FAIR

The second annual Lexington county fair started auspiciously today. The tower estate, Pelham road, Lexington, in aid of the child welfare work of the town. There were exhibits of live stock, farm products, sewing handicraft, motor truck and canned products, flags and school garden products. Athletic sports for the grammar school children were held.

LOGAN MAY BE NEW BRIGADE COMMANDER

Adjutant-General Jesse F. Stevens announces that not until a large number of new infantry companies have been inspected will a brigade commander be appointed by the Governor. Colonel Edward L. Logan, former commander of the 101st Infantry, is mentioned as the one most likely to receive the appointment.

REAR ADMIRAL WOOD GOES TO WASHINGTON

Rear Admiral Spencer S. Wood, commander of the First Naval District during the world war, has been ordered to duty as a member of the Naval Examining and Retiring Board at Washington.

Since the close of the war he has been on duty in the Pacific as commanding officer of the training fleet, his flagship being the Minneapolis.

LEGIONAIRES OFF FOR WEST

Leave South Station for Second Annual Convention in Cleveland

The New England delegation to the second annual national convention of the American Legion, which left today for Cleveland, numbers about 150 including delegates, alternates and friends. The party, made up from Yankeeland are travelling in style, having special trains of Pullman palace sleeping and dining cars.

Maine and New Hampshire members of the New England delegation joined the Massachusetts contingent in this city and others of the Massachusetts delegation were picked up in Worcester, Springfield and Pittsfield. The Rhode Island members joined at Worcester and the Vermont and Connecticut travelers at Springfield.

The party is scheduled to arrive in the convention city on Sunday morning at seven o'clock. The convention will be in session Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Returning home the party will divide into three separate units, after taking in the sights of Niagara Falls, continuing through Canada, visiting Toronto and Montreal, and arriving in Boston on Sunday afternoon. The party bound for Albany after seeing the Falls will come by direct route to Boston, arriving Friday morning, while those who go from the Falls to Albany, thence to New York city on the Hudson River day boat, disembarking Friday night and Saturday there, and getting back home by boat Sunday morning.

HERBERT FOR COMMANDER.

Cleveland will be host to the biggest gathering ever held of former service men, and with the 250th delegates, the city has prepared for thousands of convention visitors who will come with state delegations. Rounds of amusement features have been arranged, including lake trips, boxing matches, dances, cabarets, shows, outdoor meets and a frolics of all sorts. The convention programs itself will be started by a parade in which 30,000 to 40,000 ex-service men will march and for which sixty bands will furnish music.

Planters Hold Cotton

Greenville, S. C., Sept. 25.—Cotton growers in this state are refusing to sell standard cotton until the price reaches 40 cents a pound, cotton now being sold for what the planters can get.

Herbert is one of the prominently mentioned for election as national commander, but he has declined to be for the honor, but is being urged by the New England delegates to change his mind. The delegates are tempting offers of support from past delegations from a number of States.

There is every indication that the contest for the office of national commander will be a hot one, it is said. Various State departments are advancing "favorite sons" for the post. Ira C. Galbraith, former State commander Illinois will head the Illinois delegation, Edward colonel and State commander, Kentucky will nominate Emmet O'Neil, Louisville Times editor, the Virginia organization work, while Iowa will urge the election of Hanford MacNider.

MacNider has nine decorations for valor, seven received while he was a soldier, with the exception of General Pershing. He is a bank president in Mason City and was commander of the Department of Iowa. Last year he was second in the Department of Philadelphia for national commander, Massachusetts supporting him.

O'Diller will not permit his name to be mentioned in connection with the office this year, it is said, but will make more or less established at the Minneapolis convention, that no commander will be elected twice. He has served without salary. He intends to take an extended trip around the Orient following the convention.

PROGRAM OUTLINED.

Commander Dunns of the Massachusetts department has outlined a program for this State which he will explain to the delegates at a caucus to be held at the Copley Plaza. He will become settled in Cleveland quarters, for he does not believe in the "junket" of having the delegates take part in every scrimmage, but favors taking part in the big parade. One of the most important matters with which the convention must deal is:

One is the four-fold bonus plan. He would give that vigorous support and back it to the limit in the cash compensation feature of it. He would fight for a thorough investigation of the methods used in the medical board to see if they cannot be improved so that the examinations will be made more by the stopped, especially to men in hospitals and their dependents.

Further, he would like to see farmers of nation-wide interest which will be taken up by the gathering. The Legion's legislative headquarters will be discussed, many delegations being prepared to ask for the right to change the present constitution in order that the Legion may enter into political campaigns. He would like to see all of the Legion stand on labor matters, some delegations having served notice that they demand that Legion members be prohibited from participating in labor disputes and strikes.

POLITICAL POLICY CHANGE.

The bonus, vocational training and relief for disabled veterans are only a few of the many important matters of nation-wide interest which will be taken up by the gathering. The Legion's legislative headquarters will be discussed, many delegations being prepared to ask for the right to change the present constitution in order that the Legion may enter into political campaigns. He would like to see all of the Legion stand on labor matters, some delegations having served notice that they demand that Legion members be prohibited from participating in labor disputes and strikes.

FIRE 12 SHOTS AT 2 IN AUTO

Medford Police and Firemen in Four Cars Pursue Fleeing Suspects

After a chase in which a dozen shots were fired and four automobiles were used, police, with guns drawn, arrested two men on Mystic avenue, Medford.

Daniel A. Vaughan of Rendall street, Bradford, was booked on the charge of the larceny of the car. Daniel Vaughan of Blossom street, Bradford, was booked on the charge of driving a car without lights or license.

According to Medford police, the machine is the property of William J. Hefferan of No. 11 Laurel avenue, Bradford. The men were first seen by the police entering Medford square. Patrolman Edward Roland challenged them. They refused to stop. Commissioner Hefferan, he followed, firing at intervals.

Patrolman Martin McCarthy took up the pursuit in another commandeered machine. Meantime, a detachment of patrolmen had left headquarters in the police car, in charge of Sergeant William Cleary. The police machines in turn took up the chase in a fourth machine, directed by Deputy Chief J. Bertin Harvey.

The police pursuit was punctuated by revolver shots, which were answered first until the fugitives reached Harvard and Elm streets.

There another policeman loomed up in front of them and aimed at the man at the wheel. The brakes were thrown on and the pair dumped from the car and ran behind the Lincoln school.

For two hours the officers searched the school grounds before they could break Patrolman Stuart Lenox noticed two men climbing over a motor truck bound for Boston. He arrested them at the point of a gun.

Referee—Dr. Edward J. O'Brien, Tufts; umpire, C. C. McCarthy, Georgetown; field judge, Hugh McGrath, Boston College; head linesman, J. H. Pendleton, Bowdoin. Place—Stadium. Time—3 p. m.

Harvard presented a veteran lineup in the opening game of the local football season with Holy Cross as an opponent. Seven of the Crimson warriors who took the field when the starting whistle blew earned their letters last year, while 4 are playing regulars all during the 1919 season.

Holy Cross presented a light, fast team. But one man on Coach Cleo O'Donnell's squad weighed more than 175 pounds. The Purple heavyweight was Case, left guard, who tipped the beam considerably in excess of 200 pounds.

Harvard relied on straight football all during the game, not more than five different plays being called for by the Crimson quarterbacks, while Holy Cross sought to offset their opponent's advantage in weight by speed and an aerial attack.

Before the game Coach O'Donnell and that though he did not anticipate victory, he expected the Worcester collegians to make a strong showing and to keep Harvard's score within a respectable limit. Coach Fisher of Harvard expressed confidence in being confident of winning but refused to make any estimate of the score.

YALE PLANS FOR SCRUB FOOTBALL GAMES OFF

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 25.—The attempt made by the Yale football management to induce small colleges to play consolidated Yale teams, composed of reserve varsity players, has failed through. It was planned to organize an eleven which would make trips to some of the New England colleges for games during the regular season, but in every case the Yale challenge was declined.

The idea was advanced by Professor Clarence W. Mendell, chairman of the Athletic Board of Control. He regretted that there is such a lack of athletic relationship between the Yale and smaller colleges of New England.

Head Coach Tad Jones has made a departure in forming a scrub eleven along distinctive lines, with separate signals, strategy and organization from the varsity. If the scrubs could be given separate games with two or three outside rivals, their season would be an attractive feature of the Yale training.

There is still a chance for a Yale-Harvard or Yale-Princeton scrub game, a day or two before the annual varsity contests, but it is not very bright because of the difficulty of establishing the exact status of the contesting teams.

CITY ATHLETIC GAMES ON COLUMBUS DAY

The annual athletic meet of the city of Boston Columbus Day Committee will be held under the auspices of the Park and Recreation Department, on Tuesday, October 12, at 3 o'clock, at Franklin Field, corner of Blue Hill avenue and Talbot avenue.

The following list of handicap events is open to all registered athletes: 100-yard dash, 440-yard run, 880-yard run, mile run, five-mile run, relay race (each man to run 440 yards), running high jump, running broad jump, throwing the javelin.

Entries close Saturday, October 9, with Hugh C. McGrath, No. 33 Beacon street.

VALPARAISO SMOTHERS CARROLL COLLEGE, 51-0

Valparaiso, Ind., Sept. 25.—Valparaiso University opened its football season by defeating Carroll College, 51 to 6. The punting and the 47-yard drop kick by Eckland, the whirlwind game of Cearing, were features.

PLAYER'S WIFE 'BET ON GAMES'

Millionaire Turfman and Abe Attell Summoned in Baseball Scandal

Abe Attell, former lightweight boxing champion.

"Hal" Burns, former White Sox and Cincinnati pitcher, whose name also figured prominently in the testimony.

Arnold Rothstein, well known New York sporting man, and part owner of the Havre de Grace race track.

"NICKY" ARNSTEIN NAMED.

From other sources it was learned that Rothstein is understood to have washed his hands of the affair before it reached the bribery stage.

It is also known that in testimony before the grand jury Max Blumenthal and "Nicky" Arnstein, here of New York's latest mushroom Russian scandal, were named as having profited.

Only a half dozen ball players and former players and several professional gamblers will be indicted, the foreman states. The charges against the players will be conspiracy to defraud.

"Chicago and the baseball world will be amazed at the facts we have uncovered," said Mr. Fitzpatrick. "There has been very dishonest gambling in baseball, I think, and will fire the first bomb next week."

The story of the plot to betray honest baseball, as it is told here, is an involved one. Hal Chase is said to have approached Abe Attell and asked him if he could get a syndicate to "put up" $100,000 to have the White Sox players throw down their team and lose the series.

Attell is said to have approached Arnold Rothstein, who is understood to have turned his back on the scheme.

REPORTED DEAL CLOSED.

The former lightweight champion is said to have reported to Chase that the deal was closed. He ultimately obtained backing for the scheme, it is alleged, from a syndicate of crooked eastern sporting men.

This syndicate, according to the testimony, established headquarters in Chicago, and having a sure thing, took all the Chicago money in sight.

According to those "on the inside" in the investigation, the disloyal Sox players got $15,000 for losing the first game, and the rest of the $100,000 in similar instalments.

Hearings will be resumed before the Grand Jury Tuesday. At that time it is expected Boston gamblers quoted for their gameness in taking a chance on a sure thing will be among the witnesses.

Among the lines of investigation being followed up today by the office of the District Attorney of Cook County was the report that a player's wife figured in the deal by which the series was thrown.

Charles A. Clyne, United States district attorney, has jumped into the investigation of the interstate activities of the baseball pool, with prospects of prosecution for misuse of the mails in promoting a lottery.

TO RECALL JOHNSON.

Ban Johnson is to be recalled before the grand jury to explain a statement that he had heard "White Sox players would not dare to win this year's pennant because they were being blackmailed by gamblers, who threatened to squeal about the part some of them are said to have taken in last year's World Series."

"Rube" Benton, New York pitcher, who was before the jury has attributed the story of a $100,000 bribe to a gambler named Hahn, who is quoted as saying that the 1919 World Series was fixed by a syndicate of Pittsburgh gamblers.

PLAYERS NAMED.

The names of various Sox players have been mentioned in connection with the charge that they threw the world's championship to Cincinnati. Comiskey has so far refused to make public the name of the players whose pay checks and bonuses were held up, but it has become generally known that the players are:

Brooklyn Topped at the Hot Corner

HOW THE THIRD BASEMEN COMPARE.

	Offensive	Defensive	Total
Brooklyn	805	239	1044
Cleveland	803	248	1051
Chicago	822	255	1077

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

As compared with either Cleveland or Chicago the Brooklyn third base figures show considerable inferiority.

Let it not be supposed for an instant that the dope holds Johnston of Brooklyn up to be a great third baseman. He is not. He is a hard-working, willing fellow with a lot of pep and punch, erudite as a defensive player, but always trying. His offensive strength is great. He is not only a normal three hundred hitter, but he is a dangerous hitter against any kind of pitching.

Johnston never claimed to be a third baseman. Uncle Wilbur Robinson made him one. The defensive value of third base is not great. The number of chances any player has at third base is small, and the character of the chances is such that they either get them or don't. The chances are brief and quick, not a big part.

Robinson decided last Spring that his chief defensive asset was pitching. He figured this would be a year of hard hitting, and he deliberately chose to sacrifice some defensive strength in order to gain more attacking power. He knew Johnston could hit, and that he would make up in his hitting and general attack what was lost in defense. He has done more than that. He has proved a game blocker and he blocks down hits that go through some third basemen who pretend to be stars. The boy can hit—hit them hard and far away.

Compared with Buck Weaver, of course, Johnston does not shine. Weaver is hitting great guns, and is one of the really great third basemen of the country. In defensive as well as offensive work. You will observe that Weaver is not rated quite as high in my dope figures against Brooklyn pitchers as his normal average would entitle him to be rated.

That is because Sherry Smith and Grimes both would give him almost to a whisper if they are right when they work. Gardner also outclasses Johnston as a third baseman, no matter how the figures may be read.

In the next articles we will compare the shortstops and try to compile the amended infield figures, comparing the Indians and Robins on their strength against the kind of pitching they are liable to encounter.

SIX SCHOOLBOY GRID GAMES

Young Football Stars Give the Season a Real Opening Today

Schoolboy football opened with a bang today when twelve teams lined up against each other at the different parks. Games that were played today marked the opening of the four leagues that hold sway over the schoolboy football in this vicinity, namely, North Shore, Mystic Valley, Suburban and Boston School League.

Considerable interest was shown by the large crowds that attended the different contests. This alone was enough to give one an insight on the prospects for a banner year in football.

The games on tap for today follow:

Peabody High vs. Cambridge Latin at Peabody.

Beverly High vs. Lynn English at Beverly.

Winchester vs. Arlington at Winchester.

Everett vs. Brockton at Everett, Dorchester vs. Needham at Needham.

Waltham vs. Brockton at Waltham.

The Waltham-Brockton game at Waltham aroused considerable interest. The contest proved a good attraction for the fans. Coach Leary of Waltham has a team that is ready to cope with any team that is on the schedule at this early date.

The lineups follow:

LEONARD AND MORAN BATTLE IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, will risk his title at East Chicago late this afternoon when he meets Pal Moran, the New Orleans lightweight, in a ten-round bout. Leonard, who has been in training here for the past week, is reported to be in excellent condition and is looked upon as an easy winner.

TWO MORE FOR THE BRAVES

Stallings' Tribe and Phillies Wind Up Year With Double-Header

Philadelphia, Sept. 25.—The Braves and Phillies wound up the local baseball year on the Broad street grounds with a double-header today. A fair-sized crowd was out, because it was the last chance to see the Boston National Leaguers in action rather than from any great interest in the games, and but little enthusiasm was shown at any stage of the contests.

Manager Stallings sent in Dick Rudolph and Leo Townsend to stop the belated rush of the Phils, while Cactus Cravath thought Cecil Algernon Causey, one-time Brave, and Eppa Rixey were the two men to pull down the Bostonites.

Johnny Evers-man held the Braves to three hits in the third game of the series, while his teammates battered Joe Oeschger and won, 2 to 2.

WESTFIELD DECLARES FOR NEW BOXING LAW

Westfield, Sept. 25.— Westfield adopted the boxing act by vote of 41 to 41 in a spirited town meeting. An act placing firemen under civil service was also adopted.

SIEGAL AND KLOBY TO WEIGH 143 POUNDS

Young Kloby and Nate Siegel, with their managers, met the matchmaker of the Fannell A. C. and agreed to make 143 pounds at 11 o'clock on the morning of the bout.

ALL STAR SHOW AT C.A.A.

Three Ten-Rounders for Fans at Commonwealth Club Tonight

By JACK CONWAY.

The Commonwealth A. A. will stage a bang-up all-star card tonight. Matchmaker Roy Green has come to the conclusion that the fans appreciate a show of action more than one in which second-rate headliner is given an opportunity to secure a flock of Uncle Sam's currency.

Three ten-round bouts and a six-session affair have been arranged. Frank Quill, hard-hitting North End welterweight, will have Frankie (Young) Quill as an opponent in one of the bouts. Quill has already one victory to his credit over Tillo, and 'tis only natural that the latter should want to even up the score.

Johnny Noonan of Dorchester and Tony Vallin, who calls Brighton home, will clash in another ten. These boys have already engaged in a couple of thrilling engagements.

The other ten-session affair will find Phil Rose, sterling West End boxer, swapping blows with Tommy Carson of Lawrence. The show will be opened by a six-rounder.

Big Interest Shown in Brown-Martin Bout

There is more interest in the ten-round bout between Harry (Kid) Brown and Vincent Martin, which will be staged at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night under the direction of the Armory A. A., than there has been displayed in any other weight match booked by a local club in several years. Brown today stands forth as one of the most dangerous contenders for Johnny Kilbane's crown. He has all the assets that go to make a great fighter. Martin has been winning regularly and there are many fans who believe he will upset the Philadelphian. The Cambridge boxer is rated as the hardest hitting man of his weight in the world, which gives him a chance to smash his way to a victory.

Carlson to Battle Fruzetti Again

Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Quincy Hockey Club has completed the preliminary card for the ten-round bout between Clary Carlson and Jimmy Fruzetti which will be staged next Thursday night. Arthur Ellis, boy of Roxbury and Mickey Fitzsimmons of Chelsea will mingle in the semi-final of eight rounds. Eddie Foster of Roxbury and Billy Shine of Quincy will box six frames, as will Young Ryan and Denny Glynn, both of Roxbury.

McKirdy Making Matches Full of Action

Bob McKirdy is still booking matches that promise plenty of action. He has signed Terry Brooks of the Young Grand Opera House of the South End to meet in one of the eight-round bouts at his opening show at the Grand Opera House next Wednesday night. Young Bova of the West End and Teddy Murphy of the same district will swap blows in another eight-round match. The Commercial Club's boys will box together Tommy McFarland of the North End and Mickey Donovan of Roxbury.

Abe Friedman Training for Chick Hayes

Abe Friedman is busy preparing himself for his ten-round bout with Chick Hayes of Cambridge which will take place at Fall River next Tuesday night. This pair has already met twice, each boxer winning a decision. Friedman is eager for the battle from Tuesday night as he has signed to mingle with Danny Kramer of the West End. A defeat at the hands of Hayes would knock Krammer out of the ring, as well as money.

Martin Ready to Start Now

Alex McLean informs us that Terry Martin is ready to start campaigning once more. McLean has given up hope of getting Young Montreal to enter a ring with Battling Terrance. He declares that Montreal fears Joe Eagan, and that he has no open to meet any of the world's leading 126-pound boxers.

ST. MARKS TO HAVE STRONG FOOTBALL TEAM

St. Mark's Catholic Club of Dorchester will have a strong eleven on the gridiron this Fall. It will be made up of college players and high school stars, and will be coached by John O'Reilly, who played four years for Lexington High School of Kentucky and Transylvania College of the same State.

The club would like to hear from Rockland, Whitman, Riverdales and other fast teams in the State. Address letters to Football Manager St. Mark's C. C., Boston 24. Game for October 12 wanted at home.

ST. JOHN'S AND AMERICAN RUBBER MEET SUNDAY

St. John's K. of C. team of Cambridge will play the American Rubber team in the final game of a series tomorrow afternoon at Thorndike Field, East Cambridge.

Al Davidson will be on the mound for St. John's and Art. Nolan will be on the receiving end. Tibbetts and Murphy will be the battery for the American Rubber Company.

Tennis Association Thanks American

Editor Boston American:

Please permit me to say on behalf of the National Association that the way the American reported the championship at Forest Hills is greatly appreciated by the tennis public.

We feel that the newspapers had an important share in making the tournament a success it was and are glad that you found the event worthy of the space devoted to it.

Yours sincerely,
JULIAN S. MYRICK.

'CARRY LUNCH,' SAYS SHEA

Park Commissioner in New Movement and Calls on Others to Join

"I'm in sympathy with the Boston American's Bring-Your-Lunch-From-Home movement because the prices in restaurants of this city are too high," said Commissioner James B. Shea, head of the Boston Park and Recreation Department.

"Prices ought to be reduced," he added. "It's pretty hard as things are today for the working girl or young man to get enough to eat with the money at their disposal. Until the restaurants lower their prices to a reasonable point it is up to the workers of this city to carry their lunches from home. I think the Boston American is doing commendable work in pushing this idea."

Not only has the head of Boston's park system joined the American's lunch-from-home club but his assistant, Deputy Commissioner William P. Long, has become a member.

PHONE GIRLS BRING LUNCHES.

Mrs. Margaret Archibald, manager of the lunch room for employes of the Thomas G. Plant Shoe Company of Jamaica Plain, is outspoken in her condemnation of the exorbitant prices charged by Boston restaurateurs. "The prices charged by Boston restaurants are scandalous," said Mrs. Archibald, who knows what it costs to buy and serve food. "There is no doubt at all that Boston restaurant proprietors are profiteering."

Hundreds of girls employed by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company are carrying their lunches daily. Excellent rooms with proper equipment are in operation at the various exchanges. All in this district are under the able management of Edwin H. Ansell, who has studied the eating problem from every possible angle. Food at cost is supplied in the larger exchanges, but in the smaller ones the girls have a room where they prepare hot drinks and meals, etc., on electric or gas stoves.

IDEAL AT BELMONT.

The Belmont exchange is typical of many of the smaller ones. The lunch room there contains a small refrigerator, small cabinet for dishes, one table and four willow chairs. Dishes are supplied by the company. Twenty-seven girls are employed at the Belmont exchange and several of them carry their lunches every day. They find it economical to do so and at the same time they have better food.

The increased cost of carfares has added its weight to the argument in favor of carrying lunches. Several of the girls in the Quincy exchange would be compelled to pay 40 cents a day carfare to go home to lunch. The result is that many of them who might otherwise go home are added to those who will not pay the high prices charged by restaurants.

OVER 100 AT HOOD'S.

More than 100 girl employes of the H. P. Hood & Sons are enthusiastic boosters for the Bring-Your-Lunch-eon-From-Home Club of the Boston American. Equipped with a large, airy lunch room containing every convenience for doing their own cooking and preparing hot lunches, the girls are handing a body-blow to the lunch room pirates.

The lunch room, situated at the Charlestown plant of the company, was supplied by the company after the girls had reported the outrageous prices charged by restaurants for food. In addition to the high prices they were forced to meet, the girls had the added burden of being compelled to spend carfares to get from the plant to the city in order to get to the restaurants.

Accordingly a lunch room with all the fittings was put into operation. Gas stoves were installed and coffee tanks placed in operation. The girls formed a co-operative buying scheme and entered right into the scheme.

Mayor Hylan Favors Lunch-Carrying Plan

New York, Sept. 25.—Following the example of Mayor Peters of Boston, Mayor Hylan today became an exponent of the "Carry-Your-Own-Lunch" movement. Replying to an invitation to a "Dinner Pail" luncheon given by the 300 employes of the Universal Films Manufacturing Company, Mayor Hylan wrote to H. H. Cochrane, vice-president of the Universal Films, as follows:

My Dear Mr. Cochrane:

Thank you for your kind invitation to attend the Inauguration of the New York "Carry-Your-Own-Lunch" movement. Allow me to commend the employes of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company for the forward step they have taken. The idea is an excellent one and I am heartily in favor of it.

With best wishes for the movement's success, I remain,

Very truly yours,

(Signed) JOHN F. HYLAN,

Mayor.

Boston's initial step to influence restaurants and lunchrooms to lower their prices has inaugurated a nation-wide movement. Factories and business houses throughout the country have adopted the idea, and, as a result, restaurant keepers are holding confidential conferences at which are discussed measures to block the new movement, which, they admit, is spreading like wildfire.

N. Y. Exchange Raises Dues

New York, Sept. 25.—Annual dues on New York Stock Exchange will hereafter cost $1000 instead of $200, according to a decision of the board of governors.

Our Great Basement Store

IT needs no introduction to the Boston public. They know what it stands for—its policies—its wonderful success, and its object.

BUT, for the benefit of hundreds of new friends who are daily opening their eyes to the great work this store is doing for them, we'll review, in abridged form, the interesting story of this truly astonishing store—so young in years, yet so big, powerful and far-reaching in its accomplishments.

THIS is not a "bargain basement" as one might commonly interpret the term.

IT'S a complete store in itself, all on one floor, where the buying public can always find the best, newest, most carefully selected and reliable grades of less expensive merchandise, in full and complete assortments, at prices often unequalled by any other store.

YOU'LL be interested to know that it's one of the largest basement stores in the United States, covering an area of over 100,000 square feet, and extending under our Main Store, New Building and Furniture Building.

HERE are 69 complete departments, each with a full line of goods prepared to meet any demand or emergency.

MISS VALENTINE HERE IN NEW PLAY

"Pitter Patter" at the Globe was really enjoying very good business during the past week, and had the management not grasped a chance to take it into New York it might have remained much longer.

Brother Al Sheehan is fortunate to have Grace Valentine in "The Cave Girl" to go right into the Globe next week. Folks around here like Grace ever since she did the green manikin in "Lombardy Limited." She's a clever girl, and therefore I am going to give her the benefit of the doubt regarding the authorship of the following excerpt from an alleged interview with her:

"The people are Olympian in the absolution, and it is only by approaching them with awful applications, proffering sacrifice of such features of his literary progeny as may have offended that the author may secure the rare boon of a revision of judgment."

As Miss Valentine would say in "Lombardy," "My gawd, Mag, ain't it awful the way some guys talk all day and say nothin'".

Don't Like Songs Danced.

"I hope you get some singers for this show," remarked Victor Herbert to George Lederer when he was putting the finishing touches upon "The Girl in the Spotlight." "I'm tired of having my songs danced."

Lederer proudly produced Mary Milburn, a young actress, whose voice pleased even the particular Herbert, and Ben Forbes, a concert tenor, and the composer didn't have another word to say.

Victor Herbert will be on hand Monday night at the Tremont to lead the orchestra. As a conductor Victor is a great composer, but his expensive smile and his genial personality always assist in, making a "first night" something special.

George Lederer, the great musical comedy producer of the nineties, after a long hibernation, seems to have struck his old-time stride. In "Angel Face" and "The Girl in the Spotlight" he has put over two consecutive hits.

One Thousand Hamlets.

Although we know Walker Whiteside best in such roles as "The Master of Ballantrae" and in "The Typhoon," he has to his credit no less than one thousand performances of "Hamlet." He has also starred in "Richard Third," "Othello," and "Merchant of Venice."

Now that he is under the management of Augustus Pitou, he threatens to make another Shakespearean tour.

Mr. Whiteside believes that the modern method of playing a single role for years at a time is bad for acting. His hope is to go out in a repertory of strongly contrasting roles; if not Shakespearean, such parts as those he played in "The Melting Pot," "Mr. Wu," "The Typhoon," and "The Royal Box."

Helen Has Scheme.

If Attorney General Palmer wants to locate our old friend Potash, living before November he might consult with Helen Shipman, president of the "Irene" Thrift Club, which meets every Saturday afternoon at the Wilbur Theatre, following the matinee.

"When I build my theatre there'll be a grill back stage," says Miss Shipman, "where I can fry smoked potatoes; also a little annex in which members of the company can live without having to fight profiteering landlords. Except for these two things our Thrift Club is a perfect success. I've gained at least a pound as it is, for one of the Thrift Club rules is to nibble cake during intermissions in order to check old appetite that used to rage when you could go out and order a good dinner without going broke. We're still invited out to Harvard water sup'pers once in a while, and that helps some; but aside from that we've saved about a million dollars since Irene opened in Boston by turning up our noses at your good cooking. If I can be elected in Boston long enough I'll run for Mayor or sheriff on a thrift platform."

Aeroplaning in Mexico.

Even Dave Stamper could have devised a more impressive effect than the finale of the first act of "The Broken Wing" when a life sized aeroplane with two men in it apparently drops out of the sky and falls through the roof of a Mexican villa where the action of the play happens to be going on.

How this stunt is done is a secret just now, but a reputation for saying aeroplane is used, and the house is made of the best matchboard and canvas available for stage purposes.

But don't stay away from "The Broken Wing" because you think it is a wild melodrama. It is really a very bright comedy, and the character of the Mexican lassie is one of the most entertaining characterizations in years.

Why the name "Broken Wing"? Because one of the wings of the aeroplane is broken, and the young aviators in Mexico supplies us the plot.

The Two Abe's.

After seeing "Abie the Agent" in the afternoon and "Abie the Honor. Abe Potash" in the evening on Wednesday, I'll have to admit that the Hebrew race isn't being traduced and maligned on the stage. Not so that you could notice it.

Abe the Agent has the milk of human kindness and sympathy in him like the perspiration out of a fat man on the Fourth of July. Abe Potash is about the most unselfish person since that old Roman consul executed his own son for treason against the state.

Here is Potash, elected mayor and chosen as the candidate of himself to open a prison for his own son rather than do a little polite grafting of the sort that the average mayor would consider a pleasure.

Abie Kabibble at the Arlington isn't as grotesque a character as Hirshfield's cartoons make him out to be. In fact, Nick Adams as Abe the agent is so much like Abe Potash down the line at the Plymouth as his own brother. To tell the truth, Adams used to play Potash in former Potash and Perlmutter comedies.

What has become of Perlmutter, by the way? I missed him. Potash would probably be less noble but more amusing if he had Mawrice to tell him where he got off in "His Honor, Abe Potash."

It was an odd coincidence that I took in these two Hebrew comedies on Yom Kipper.

Mystery Story.

Eleanor Painter, the heroine of "Flora Dora," when that celebrated revival of an old favorite comes to the Opera House next week, is a prima donna whose career has been mostly achieved outside Boston.

She studied for grand opera abroad, and made her American debut in the "Lilac Domino," Andreas Dippel's operetta which created a furore some seasons ago. In Boston she was ill most of the time, and an understudy sang her role. Her next success was in "Princess Pat"; but she left the cast before coming to Boston. Then she joined the Chicago Opera, and tried serious music for a while, but she is back again in musical comedy.

By the way, in "The Lilac Domino" with Miss Painter was Wilfred Doubbit, a baritone. He disappeared after a season, and was supposed to have joined the English army. But a year later a gentleman with whiskers called Louis Graveure, who resembled him greatly, went upon the concert stage in this country. People declared he was Doubbit, but he denied it, and claimed to be a Belgian. He had a big concert success, and is still before the public, but a year or two ago he and Eleanor Painter were married.

MISS BAINTER'S PARROT.

Fay Bainter, star of "East Is West," owns a parrot named Al. This parrot was sold to her under a guarantee that it had a vocabulary of 300 words, which beats the amount at the disposal of some press agents. Miss Bainter owned the biped for more than a year before it vouchsafed any remarks at all.

She was just about to present him to her press agent, Al Dubois, in exchange for a wide ribbon he uses to confine his eyeglasses when the bird suddenly began to repeat the sentence used by Charley Yang when he suddenly enters and discovers Ming Toy playing and singing the Chinese lullaby.

"That's a d— fine song."

Since that time the parrot has been quite talkative and Miss Bainter says that a lot of his vocabulary that came with his guarantee isn't suitable for publication.

He Didn't Even Know Them.

I met Raymond Hitchcock on the street the other afternoon just outside the Colonial Theatre. Raymond always looks funny on as well as off, and his sartorial color scheme would have caused an Italian immigrant to exclaim of envy.

"Terrible thing has happened," said Hitchcock in the most serious manner. "Terrible thing."

"What is it?"

Mr. and Mrs. Warner have telegraphed me for seats for tonight's performance, and I've had the awful. I don't what to do."

"Who are Mr. and Mrs. Warner?" I asked curiously.

"Who? Oh I don't know."

Wasn't that exasperating?

Art Editor on the Loose.

Don Barkley, the comedian of "Step Lively, Girls," which plays the Gayety next week, is an editor on the San Francisco Examiner and worked up to be assistant art editor. He broke into vaudeville showing and giving "chalk talks," a lecture illustrated by pictures drawn on a blackboard, and gradually edged into the comedy side. Several seasons ago he was one of the chief fun makers in Ziegfeld's Follies, and has recently returned from London, where he appeared at the Palace Theatre.

Too Much Murphy.

Gracie Emmett, the character comedienne at the Orpheum this week, has made "Mrs. Murphy" famous in vaudeville, but while living from vaudeville, first introduced Mrs. Murphy in a playlet called "Mrs. Murphy's First Husband." Then came "Mrs. Murphy's Second Husband" and finally "Mrs. Murphy in Society." This week she shows in "Mrs. Murphy Goes Fishing."

Jacchia to Lead Cecilia.

The Cecilia Society, which has been without a shepherd for several seasons, has finally engaged Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Pops. Mr. Jacchia has made quite a dent in Boston musical life in a couple of seasons. In addition to the Pops and the Cecilia he is the director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, an institution which in a couple of years has sprung into prominence, and is able to give many free scholarships.

TREMONT THEATRE

"The Girl in the Spotlight," Victor Herbert's latest musical comedy production, comes to the Tremont Monday night. Mr. Herbert will personally conduct the opening performance. "The Girl in the Spotlight" was acclaimed by all the New York critics as the best musical show that has been in New York in many years. The book and lyrics are by Robert Bruce, the numbers were put on by Julian Alfred and the production was staged personally by George W. Lederer. In selecting the cast for the play Mr. Lederer has grouped a company which has probably been equalled in a musical play. Among those of its kind last season, "Peek-A-Boo" has been enlarged and even improved upon since its last appearance here.

"FLORODORA"

A theatrical event that will be relished by the old-times, as well as the younger generation of theatre-goers in this city, is the forthcoming engagement of the Messrs. Shubert's mammoth revival of "Florodora" at the Boston Opera House for an engagement of two weeks only, beginning Monday evening, October 4. This is the all-star cast that will be seen here. Included are: John Hendricks, the well-known basso; John Reinhard, Nell Moore, Minerva Grey, remembered here in her eccentric character in "Angel Face"; Jean Lewis, Agnes Paterson, Ruby Lewis, Lillian Young, Lucelle Kent, Flora Crosbie, Jane White, Evelyn Greig, Gertrude Reynolds, Helen Gates.

GLOBE THEATRE

At the Globe Theatre, for an indefinite engagement beginning Monday night, Sept. 27, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest will present their latest comedy success "The Cave Girl." This play is by George Middleton and Guy Bolton, and comes from the Longacre Theatre, New York. It is only through a special arrangement between Messrs. Comstock and Gest and Marcus Lowe that it is presented here at this early date with the original cast, headed by Grace Valentine and John Cope.

In their previous comedies Messrs. Middleton and Bolton aimed their satirical shafts at the smart Long Island set. In the newest piece they have gone to the woods of northern Maine for their locale, the action of "The Cave Girl" transpiring in a hunting lodge and an isolated camp—a full two day journey by foot from the nearest village, The story has to do with an uncultured though fascinating and primitive type of girl, Margot Sanderre.

The title role will be played by Grace Valentine, well known to local theatregoers by reason of her many appearances here in "Lombardi, Ltd.," and other notable hits; while John Cope, also well known to Boston playgoers, will be seen in his original role of James Bates, the Wall Street magnate. Others of the original New York cast are: Mark Smith, Brandon Peters, Martha Mayo, Saxon Kling, Grant Stewart, Arthur Berry, Mary Kennedy and Franklyn Hann.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

At the Malden Auditorium for the coming week the Temple Stock Company will present "Where the Mountains," a drama of the Virginia hill country. The story concerns the awakening of a young girl of the mountain people to the realization that her untutored and narrowed life is depriving her of the real happiness she covets. This is brought about by the presence of a young Easterner who has come prospecting for coal deposits.

GAYETY THEATRE

Arthur Pearson's "Step Lively, Girls" will be the attraction at the Gayety Theatre next week. To keep abreast of the fast developing girl show of the country, Pearson is supplying to any producer; but Mr. Pearson has the proud record of never slipping ahead. In the past New York season there were produced exactly thirty-nine new musical comedies and thirteen revived musical comedies, with seven new revues for the Summer season.

For comedy, Don Barclay, late of Ziegfeld Follies, heads the bill. He alone indicates the high standard set by Mr. Pearson in this his 1920 version of "Step Lively, Girls." With him are Patti Moore, soubrette, Louise Carlyle, prima donna soprano, just returned from entertaining the "Buddies" overseas; Swift and Daley, Gene "Face" Morgan.

"TRANSPLANTING JEAN"

Arthur Byron and Martha Hedman, together with an admirably chosen comedy company, will appear in "Transplanting Jean" at the Hollis Street Theatre for a limited engagement beginning next Monday night. This comedy is a translation from the original French by Harrison Rhodes of collaborators, de Flers and de Cavallet, and when presented at the Theatre Gymnase in Paris created such great interest that it ran continuously for fifteen months at that playhouse.

WALDRON'S CASINO

One of the positive treats of the season is promised at Waldron's Casino next week, beginning with a matinee on Monday, when Jean Bedini presents his 1920-1921 edition of his sensational success, "Pee-a-Boo." Universally considered the greatest show of its kind last season, "Peek-A-Boo" has been enlarged and even improved upon since its last appearance here.

"FLORODORA"

A theatrical event that will be relished by the old-times, as well as the younger generation of theatre-goers in this city, is the forthcoming engagement of the Messrs. Shubert's mammoth revival of "Florodora" at the Boston Opera House for an engagement of two weeks only, beginning Monday evening, October 4. This is the all-star cast that will be seen here. Included are: John Hendricks, the well-known basso; John Reinhard, Nell Moore, Minerva Grey, remembered here in her eccentric character in "Angel Face"; Jean Lewis, Agnes Paterson, Ruby Lewis, Lillian Young, Lucelle Kent, Flora Crosbie, Jane White, Evelyn Greig, Gertrude Reynolds, Helen Gates.

GLOBE THEATRE

At the Globe Theatre, for an indefinite engagement beginning Monday night, Sept. 27, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest will present their latest comedy success "The Cave Girl." This play is by George Middleton and Guy Bolton, and comes from the Longacre Theatre, New York. It is only through a special arrangement between Messrs. Comstock and Gest and Marcus Lowe that it is presented here at this early date with the original cast, headed by Grace Valentine and John Cope.

In their previous comedies Messrs. Middleton and Bolton aimed their satirical shafts at the smart Long Island set. In the newest piece they have gone to the woods of northern Maine for their locale, the action of "The Cave Girl" transpiring in a hunting lodge and an isolated camp—a full two day journey by foot from the nearest village, The story has to do with an uncultured though fascinating and primitive type of girl, Margot Sanderre.

The title role will be played by Grace Valentine, well known to local theatregoers by reason of her many appearances here in "Lombardi, Ltd.," and other notable hits; while John Cope, also well known to Boston playgoers, will be seen in his original role of James Bates, the Wall Street magnate. Others of the original New York cast are: Mark Smith, Brandon Peters, Martha Mayo, Saxon Kling, Grant Stewart, Arthur Berry, Mary Kennedy and Franklyn Hann.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

At the Malden Auditorium for the coming week the Temple Stock Company will present "Where the Mountains," a drama of the Virginia hill country. The story concerns the awakening of a young girl of the mountain people to the realization that her untutored and narrowed life is depriving her of the real happiness she covets. This is brought about by the presence of a young Easterner who has come prospecting for coal deposits.

GAYETY THEATRE

Arthur Pearson's "Step Lively, Girls" will be the attraction at the Gayety Theatre next week. To keep abreast of the fast developing girl show of the country, Pearson is supplying to any producer; but Mr. Pearson has the proud record of never slipping ahead. In the past New York season there were produced exactly thirty-nine new musical comedies and thirteen revived musical comedies, with seven new revues for the Summer season.

For comedy, Don Barclay, late of Ziegfeld Follies, heads the bill. He alone indicates the high standard set by Mr. Pearson in this his 1920 version of "Step Lively, Girls." With him are Patti Moore, soubrette, Louise Carlyle, prima donna soprano, just returned from entertaining the "Buddies" overseas; Swift and Daley, Gene "Face" Morgan.

"TRANSPLANTING JEAN"

Arthur Byron and Martha Hedman, together with an admirably chosen comedy company, will appear in "Transplanting Jean" at the Hollis Street Theatre for a limited engagement beginning next Monday night. This comedy is a translation from the original French by Harrison Rhodes of collaborators, de Flers and de Cavallet, and when presented at the Theatre Gymnase in Paris created such great interest that it ran continuously for fifteen months at that playhouse.

McISAAC says that

WALTER WHITESIDE in "The Master of Ballantrae" begins his last week at the Hollis. It is an exciting romantic drama by Carl Mason, based on the Stevenson novel.

"IRENE," the merry musical comedy at the Wilbur, has now entered upon its last three weeks with patronage quite unabated.

"HITCHY-KOO, 1920," offers Julia Sanderson, Q. P. Huntley, Raymond Hitchcock, the Mosconi Brothers and other celebrities in a new revue. Colonial.

"THE BROKEN WING," a comedy drama which is both amusing and exciting, begins its second week at the Park Square.

"EAST IS WEST," with Fay Bainter, an exotic drama with a clever leading woman, is repeating in Boston its New York success. Shubert.

"HIS HONOR, ABE POTASH," offers Barney Bernard in the fourth of the plays based upon Montague Glass' stories. Abe in politics is very amusing. Plymouth.

"ABIE, THE AGENT," at the Arlington is another play of Jewish characters. It is based upon the cartoons and contains many laughable situations.

"WAY DOWN EAST," Griffith's latest and in some respects his greatest film, begins its second week at the Majestic. The attendance last week was enormous.

queen of musical plays comes to Boston immediately following its engagement of nineteen weeks at the Century Theatre in New York and a run of four weeks in Philadelphia and one week in Washington. Heading the cast is Miss Elsie Janis, the charming prima donna. Her principal support are William Danforth, Walter Woolf, Harry Fender, Dana Sykes, Maxine Borwon, Isabel Rodgers, Nace Bonville and Frances Mary Halliday.

ZIEGFELD FOLLIES

The 1920 version of "Ziegfeld Follies" is to be shown at the Colonial Theatre for four weeks only, commencing Monday, October 18. The principal cast, which is at present appearing in the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York, will be seen here.

"BETTY BE GOOD"

The attraction at the Arlington Theatre, beginning a week from Monday, October 4, will be "Betty Be Good," the musical comedy success which was received with such favor in Boston for eight weeks last season. Rena Parker will be seen in the leading role.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Having made extensive plans for the coming season of Boston Symphony Concerts, which will open a week from next Friday and Saturday, October 8 and 9, Pierre Monteux will start rehearsals with the orchestra next week.

Much is to be expected of the coming season of twenty-four Friday afternoon and twenty-four Saturday evening Symphony concerts. Public confidence and enthusiasm have been clearly expressed in the unprecedented sale of seats by subscription—only a few for Saturday evenings remain untaken.

In addition to the regular series some special concerts on a large scale are being planned, and also a number of young people's concerts, to be given by the full orchestra under the regular conductor, thus further developing the concept so successfully made last Winter.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM

There are a great many good things in store for patrons of Loew's Orpheum Theatre during the coming week, and the prime feature of interest will be the appearance of Boston's own Gracie Emmett, acknowledged one of America's leading character comedians as well as a playwright of note, in her own comedy playlet, "Mrs. Murphy Goes Fishing." Miss Emmett has made the character of Mrs. Murphy as famous as that of Mrs. Wiggs—and in the role of the jovial Mrs. Murphy she is at her best. Miss Emmett will appear for the first three days of the week only. Another pair of Boston's own will be Monie and Lyons, in their character singing, harmony, music and nonsense. They always receive a welcome in the Hub. The stellar photoplay attraction will be Owen Moore in his latest comedy diversion, "The Poor Simp."

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

At the very height of its popularity, "While New York Sleeps" is to be taken away from its successful run at the Boston Opera House and the coming week, which is the fourth, will positively terminate the engagement of William Fox's sensational and unsurpassed cinema-dramatic triumph. The termination of the showing of this vivid picturization of New York life to the very core will take place on Saturday evening, Oct. 2.

WAY DOWN EAST

The simple, plain, old-fashioned love story of "Way Down East," shown under the wizard genius of D. W. Griffith, enters upon its second unusual week at the Majestic Theatre. It has been pronounced by public and critics alike as being one of the most remarkable entertainments ever presented in a theatre. In the cast of the production are Lillian Gish, Mary Hay, Kate Bruce, Vivian Ogden, Florence Strong, Mrs. Morgan Belmont, Richard Barthelmess, Creighton Hale, Burr McIntosh, Porter Strong, George Neville and a large quota of Griffith players.

PARK THEATRE

The second Boston release of the Associated Producers will be J. Parker Read, Jr.'s romantic society drama "The Leopard Woman," in which that popular screen artist, Louise Glaum, will be seen in the leading role. All readers are familiar with Stuart Edward White's story of the adventures of John Culbertson, scientist-explorer, and a strange beautiful woman, known to him only as Madame, whom he calls the Leopard Woman, because of her cruel, crafty cunning.

One of the big scenes of the play is where the Leopard Woman attempts to delay him on an important diplomatic mission to the heart of Africa, using every wile known to woman. She finds that her love for him, born of hate, is almost as powerful as the duty she has sworn to perform. This and many other scenes constitute this great film spectacle which will be presented at the Park Theatre for one week beginning Monday, together with one of the Universal special releases, "The Red Lane," featuring Frank Mayo.

GORDON'S CHELSEA OLYMPIA

Miss Kellerman, who will be seen Monday and Tuesday only at Gordon's Chelsea Olympia Theatre in "What Women Love," a First National attraction, believes that every child should be taught to swim shortly after it learns to talk and walk, and that by means of aquatic exercises hundreds of youngsters who are inclined to be puny and sickly can be developed into sturdy young specimens of American manhood and womanhood.

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH

Katharine MacDonald, famed as the most beautiful woman in America, supported by a well known cast including Nigel Barrie, Dorothy Cummings, Ernest Joy, Margaret Campbell and William Clifford is the star of the latest First National attraction, which comes to Gordon's Old South Theatre for one week.

BROADWAY THEATRE

The Broadway Theatre, South Boston, comes forward with an unusually strong bill the coming week, both in its vaudeville, motion picture and photoplay features. For the first half of the week the vaudeville headliners include: The Petit Troupe, in the speedy acrobatic specialty; the Murray girls, in a song and dance novelty; Snow and Valmar, in a comedy singing and talking skit, entitled "You Pick 'Em," and Cello, a European comedy musical offering. The feature photoplay for the first half of the week will be Clara Kimball Young in "For the Soul of Rafael."

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

Charles Ray, the film star, comes forward with George M. Cohan's great play, "45 Minutes From Broadway," for his first independent screen offering. And judging from the reception accorded the picture, Mr. Ray is coming in for his full share of the success of revivals. This picture, which is scheduled as a First National attraction at Gordon's Olympia, begins Monday.

TREMONT TEMPLE

The new Marshall Nellan photoplay, "Go and Get It," begins its second week at the Tremont Temple, well settled as a popular attraction. As a motion picture of realism, romance and unusual thrills it leaves nothing to be desired as a perfect attraction of this sort.

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQ.

John Emerson and Anita Loos wrote "The Perfect Woman." Constance Talmadge's latest starring vehicle, which is interspersed with suspense and laughter. "The Perfect Woman," which comes to Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre Monday is the story of Mary Blake, who vamps her way into the home of Jimmy Stanhope, multi-millionaire and supposed woman-hater, bringing a series of amusing and pleasing incidents.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

"Mrs. Jimmie Thompson" will be the attraction at the Somerville Theatre for the coming week, and the fact that it is only one week since it was in Boston for legitimate stage vouches for the fact that Manager Clyde B. McKeard works quick.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA

For the coming week at Loew's Columbia Theatre five acts of splendid vaudeville will be offered, comprising a splendid collection of artists in singing, dancing, jesting and acrobatic feats, each act having a punch of its own.

DEBUT OF BURKE

Tom Burke, the latest Irish tenor, has just landed in New York. Mr. Burke sings at the Royal Opera in London. He told the interviewers that he was born in Leigh, Lancashire, but his parents were Irish.

Mrs. Burke is an attractive young French girl who is also a singer. They both studied opera in Italy. Burke is to make a tour of America under the direction of William Morris. Mr. Burke makes his Boston debut in Symphony Hall Sunday evening, October 10.

DANCING POPULAR

Dancing bids fair to be well nigh a universal pastime this coming Winter if the opening of the fall season is any criterion. The management of the Crescent Gardens ball room at Revere Beach, the largest and most popular all the year round dancing establishment in the country, reports that after a most unusual and largely patronized Summer season the fall business has opened with a rush, and that the outlook is for an unprecedented business through the fall and Winter. The accessibility of Crescent Gardens and its close proximity to the railroad station, as well as the ample facilities for the parking of automobiles are the two leading results in a large attendance of patrons from all over Greater Boston nightly, and the policy of running every evening will be continued this coming fall and Winter as in past years.

Reporters Lead a Merry Life.

Reporters lead a lively and adventurous life, but a reporter in the films must also lead a charmed one. There is one stunt done by Pat O'Malley who plays the reporter in "Go and Get It" at the Tremont Temple in which the steps out of a speeding aeroplane upon the top of a passenger train which would conceal the blood of most reporters.

But to make the thing even more effective, Mr. O'Malley boards the aeroplane from the train.

Anywhere who has ridden upon a rapidly moving train knows how it lurches so—that standing in the aisles is not easy. Yet here is Pat standing on the roof of a passenger train and cooly swinging off upon the rope ladder of a swiftly swooping aeroplane which crosses the train for a fraction of a second.

And this is only one of a score of hair-raisers which O'Malley passes through to get a "scoop."

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Mrs. Morgan Belmont, of New York and Newport, the first American Society woman to appear in motion pictures, will be seen in D. W. Griffith's production of "Way Down East," which will open at the Majestic Theatre on Monday night.

Mrs. Belmont plays the part of a Boston society matron in the earlier scenes in the production. For six weeks she reported at the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck (N. Y.) every morning, working until late at night and receiving the same pay as other players working in the same capacity.

Mrs. Belmont, like Lady Manners, is very tall and slender. Several years ago she appeared in society theatricals with considerable success.

When Mr. Griffith was casting the society scenes for "Way Down East" Mrs. Belmont was one of eleven members of the social set who applied for an engagement. Her personality was considered most suitable to the role.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Andrews, well known in Newport and New York society. Her marriage to Morgan Belmont, son of August Belmont, was one of the brilliant events of the Newport season in 1915.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN
Again by the
ORPHEUM THEATRE
Last Week
It's an old story for Loew's Theatre Co. Stockholders, but it is a very unusual one these days.
Six years ago I organized a corporation to build this theatre. I stated that I believed I would be able to pay 10% on the investment.
I NEVER PAID LESS
The stockholders received 10% the FIRST YEAR, also certain valuable subscription rights, and then 12%—and now 1600 people will receive
3½% Quarterly Dividend Oct. 1st
AND BUT THE ORPHEUM was built on leased land, which was the only criticism of the investment by the most conservative. On May 1st, 1920, we took title to our property—the finest lot of land in Boston, and we now own it free and clear.
Why Isn't Loew's Selling at $20 a Share or More?
PROBABLY IT WILL
NOW YOU CAN BUY A FEW MORE SHARES AT $14 A SHARE
ALSO State Theatre Stock, which will own two theatres, a garage, ballroom, 8 stores, and office buildings—most of these are leased already. The State Theatre will be much larger than the Orpheum.
THE SHOW is always one of superlative merit, made up of six vaudeville acts, the latest comedy and News Pictorial. Mon. to Thurs. we have OWEN MOORE in "The Poor Simp," and Thurs. to Sat. Dorothy Gish in "Miss Rebellion." Every Sunday—Continuous vaudeville and pictures. Doors open at 3:30 P. M.

The Post says: "When a Boston audience is held so motionless with wonder that it forgets to struggle into hats and coats in the midst of last lines; when it needs must sit still, gasp, and slowly recover thru the first measures of the exit march—a new play has accomplished something. 'The Broken Wing' achieved this feat."

HELIOTROPE

Stirring Serial of a Father's Sacrifice

Read This Story Here Day by Day, Then Watch for It at Leading Theatres

"Heliotrope," from the story by Richard Washburn Child, is a Cosmopolitan production released as a Paramount-Artcraft picture.

Directed by George D. Baker

Screen Version Novelized

By Jane McLean

WHILE Heliotrope Harry and Mrs. Hasduck were playing hide and go seek with each other, the Andrews family, happily oblivious of the fate that threatened to wreck all their plans, went along outfitting Alice in a manner befitting her new station.

To the girl herself these days in New York were a source of Arabian Nights' wonder. All the dreams she had dreamed and the castles she had built were utterly dwarfed by this visit to the greatest city of the world with the man she loved and his father and sister.

Promised to Keep It

Love had surrounded Alice with a halo of radiance; Jimmie's father saw in her not only a daughter, but a blessing, while Mabel, exulting in her friend's success, flattered herself on her own good taste in selecting Alice as a confidante from all the girls in the convent.

It had been Mr. Andrews' idea that his son and daughter should be married in New Orleans; he had made the trip to New York merely to give the young couple an outing and a wide opportunity to buy the trousseau that he insisted on presenting to Alice as a pre-wedding gift.

"I don't want you to feel dependent, little girl," he said with a smile when they were alone after their arrival in the metropolis. "I want you to do me a favor—I want you to accept this little token from me," and he held out a small, oblong package.

"Of course I will," Alice agreed heartily.

"You'll promise not to give it back; you'll promise to keep it and make the most of it?"

"Of course I will," said Alice.

"Raise your righ hand and swear," demanded Jimmie's father.

Alice raised her right hand. "All right, my dear," and he slipped the package into her hand.

When Alice opened it she found it contained a bankbook with five thousand dollars to her credit, and her first impulse, outside of a wave of gratitude was a feeling that she ought to return it.

Then she remembered her promise. Mr. Andrews smiled when he saw her at dinner. "Put one over on you, little girl, eh?"

"More than one," laughed Alice.

"That's right," he winked at Jimmie, "just a little joke between Alice and me."

In No Hurry

Alice confided in Mabel later that she'd bought everything she could think of, only to be told she was too modest. "You see," the latter explained, "Father didn't have anything to start with and he's always said his children should have all he missed. So you'll be really hurting his feelings if you say you want to stop spending money. He'll let us know when it's time to go back."

But Mr. Andrews seemed in no hurry, and the round of theatre-going and night-seeing continued. It was Jimmie who began to grow restless. He broached his impatience to Alice first.

"This is all very fine, Alice, but oughtn't we to be getting home?"

She looked up at him with a smile. "Why, Jimmie?"

"Because I want you for my own as soon as I can get you, that's why."

"That's the best reason in the world, but I can hardly say anything."

"No, you can't—well, we'll wait a few days longer."

Jimmie was spared the necessity of intimating to his father that both he and Alice had had their fill of visiting. A telegram from the South did it for him. Mr. Andrews suddenly became a man of business.

"All play and no work makes Jack a dull boy," he said laughingly, turning the old saying, "there's trouble in the camps and I'll have to be going home—you people can stay."

Emphatic negations rather surprised him, pleased him too. "Oh, you're ready to go back with me—that's good; I was wondering how long you'd stand this."

"How soon?" Mabel asked.

"Well, this is Friday—suppose we start Sunday evening—get the night train?"

"And you're going right to the camps?" asked Jimmie, a new light in his eye.

"Straight—can't even stop over at the house."

Jimmie looked at Alice then at his father—"If that's the case why can't we be married before we go?"

"Oh, Jimmy," Mabel protested, "married in a strange city—when we were planning so much at home."

Spoil Him

Mr. Andrews glanced round the table. "What 'a the verdict, Alice? The bride's the one who has any say so in a matter of this kind."

"I—I—I'll do whatever Jimmie thinks best."

"Oh, don't give in to him that way," said Mr. Andrews, laughing, "you'll have him spoiled." Nevertheless he turned to his son. "Well, young man, what is your hurry.

"We can be married here," said Jimmie, "and then we can take our time getting back, that is, Alice and I can—perhaps spend a week here—Mabel can go back with you and I'll follow; if there's anything serious you can write and I'll bring Alice home and join you."

"That sounds reasonable," his father agreed.

"I suppose it does," Mabel sighed. It's up to me to find a sweetheart, I guess."

"I'll leave it to you and Alice to arrange to the full and not a license," said Mr. Andrews, "while I attend to a few telegrams, and Mabel you might amuse yourself by packing up everything we aren't going to need and sending it on by express."

"I suppose," Alice hinted, as he left the room, "we'll have to hunt up a minister too, and there may be church arrangements to make."

"I guess that won't be the most difficult thing in the world," Jimmie smiled at her, "just to think that only two days from now you'll be really mine—Mrs. Jimmie Andrews."

"It's wonderful," said Alice.

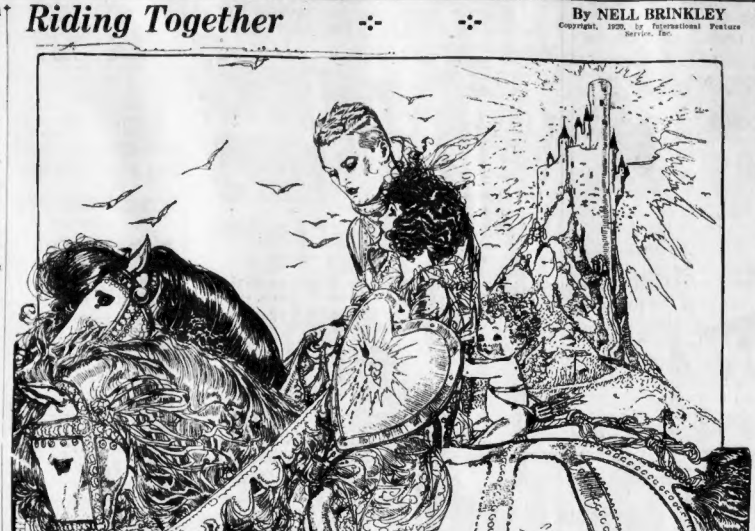
Riding Together

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1920, by International Feature Service, Inc.



IF you were goin' seeking some Eldorado, "riding along, singing a song" —some place of intimate content—and you had never seen it in all your life; and you wished to arrive there with a dear pal and friend who had never seen it, either; and you wished to see it only with but that one; you wished to arrive in it, and live in it—once you found that lovely place—with but one, that one, until all your head was gray, and the way to it was through a country that neither of you had ever tramped or ridden through before, a country as new to you as the world was the day you were "borned"—would you start out separately and expect to ever arrive there together? Not never you would! Why, then, do Lovers, married Lovers, hunting for the Paradise of content together, the Lovers' Eldorado, the Castle-in-Spain-land, the faery-place of Utter-most Happiness, first marry and then go riding for it apart—and expect to arrive together and be happy for evermore?

You just got to ride together! Hand in hand, side by side, knee to knee; sharing your food and thoughts, sharing the beauties and the mud-puddles of the road together; laughing together, weeping together, playing together—just riding together—if ever you want to find the little high town of happiness with its red and gold roofs, and the nothing-but-happy faces to be met on its streets!

And 'courses you have to give love himself a leg-up behind, before you shake your bridles and step out on the high-road. Or you won't get there even "riding together"!

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

"NOW, be sensible, Anne," I told myself. "They may have gone off the path and lost their way. But to think that any harm has come to them is silly, and to imagine for one instant that they'd drag you out here and then elope is melodramatic. They're just lost, and if they aren't back by eight you must send out a search party."

Of course, I didn't want to do this if it could be avoided. It would mean publicity and a fuss, which the whole Harrison tribe would go miles out of its way to avoid.

Time dragged on toward eight, and as I sat in the lobby, where I could watch both front and side entrances, I had a great struggle not to go all to pieces. Phoebe and Neal had left me before five and had promised to be back in time to dress for seven o'clock dinner. What could have happened?

And Tom Mason.

Suddenly an inspiration came to me. Probably Daisy was with Carl Booth, who was due back in town just about now. Nice old "big brother" Carl would know just what to do. I'd go to the dining room door, and if he were there I'd have the waiter take me to him.

Suiting action to thought, I hurried across the lobby and to the very door of the dining room. Just as I got there something made me turn, and there in the lobby stood Neal, looking sadly scratched and bedraggled. But he was alone. No Phoebe. I turned and ran to him, but not before I had glimpsed Daisy and a masculine figure I identified with a feeling of distaste and distrust. It was Tom Mason—not Carl Booth; and that put an altogether different complexion on what I had just been regarding as merely a jolly little dinner party.

When I reached Neal he seized my wrist and pulled me out into the shadows of the veranda. There cowered Phoebe—a sad sight, indeed—in her pretty white clothes all caked in mud.

"Oh, darling! Are you hurt?" I cried, darting forward to gather her in my arms.

She giggled reassuringly. And Neal, motioning me away from her disheveled figure, explained:

"I'm a dub woodsman. Lost the path. My poor darling fumbled into a stream I didn't notice in time. Wrap her in your warm cloak, please, Hubby, so no one sees her like this, and mind that she has a warm bath and doesn't take cold. I want you to tuck her right into bed—and I'll send up dinner."

"Not much!" exclaimed Phoebe, with surprising vigor. "A warm bath and clean clothes'll set me right in no time. And the same for my boy. Will you starve, Anne, if you have to wait on your truants another half hour?"

"Not I," I replied with great relief, as I followed Phoebe into the inn and up to her room. Once there I insisted on giving her a strenuous rub-down and on dosing her up a bit against her taking cold. Then I laid out her clothes and went to see what I could do for my Neal.

For all that I helped them, and they both hurried me fast as ever they could, it was nine before we got down to the dining-room. It was still crowded with motor parties, but when the captain piloted us by the table where Tom and Daisy had sat an hour before, it was empty.

I wondered if they had seen me and had fled. I wondered——

I succeeded in settling my apartment by telephone Sunday morning, and Hedwig assured me that there was no message from "Mr. Harrison." As she insisted that she hadn't left the apartment alone for a minute of my stay I didn't argue, but blamed "Central," on whom we put so much nowadays, and, attributing Jim's silence to the same agency, I managed not to worry.

Put Them Aside

When thoughts of Daisy and Tom threatened to disturb I resolutely put them aside. Hadn't I determined not to be "Mrs. Fix-It" any longer? Hadn't I promised Jim as much? Why make myself miserable over Tom's philanderings with a girl who—even if she was my dead friend Kate's little sister—was also a thief? But somehow one worry refused to leave me—would it have been better for me to have chaperoned the party Tom had suggested, Phoebe and Neal, Irma Warren and her uncle, who would have done pretty well in turn to chaperone me?

We arrived home about nine Sunday evening, and whatever doubts and fears I had were more than counterbalanced by Phoebe's gratitude to me for making her holiday possible.

"Our Neal is such a darling! You know it, don't you, Anne?" she whispered at my threshold, when Neal went ahead to carry in my bags and light up the place for me. "You don't blame me for getting desperate sometimes over the way I have to wait and wait and just wait—do you?"

"No, I don't, honey-girl," I said, borrowing Neal's name for her. "I just ache for you sometimes when I stop and think how happy you'd be in a little nest of your own. But if it's hard on you—don't you think it's twice as hard on that brother of mine?"

The Restless Sex

By Robert W. Chambers

"The Restless Sex," soon to be seen in all leading motion picture theatres, is a Cosmopolitan production, released as a Paramount-Artcraft picture, featuring Marion Davies.

CHAPTER XXXIII.—Continued

"I WAS about to tell you that I'm going over to Paris for a while. You know how it is—a man grows restless—wants to run over and take a look at the place just to satisfy himself that it's still there." His strained smile remained stamped on his face after his gaze shifted from Grismer's penetrating eyes—unamiling, golden-deep eyes that seemed to have perceived a rent in him, and were looking through the aperture into the secret places of his mind.

More Questions.

"When are you going, Cleland?"

"Oh, I don't know. Some time this week, if I can get accommodations."

"You go alone?"

"Why—of course!"

"I thought perhaps you might feel that Stephanie ought to see Europe."

"I hadn't—considered"——

He reddened, took a swallow of his orange juice, and, holding the glass, turned his eyes on the waxed model.

"How long will you be away?" asked Grismer in his still and singularly agreeable voice.

There was another silence. Then Cleland made a painful effort at careless frankness once more:

"That reminds me, Grismer," he exclaimed. "I can't ever repay you for that fountain, but I can do my damnedest with a check-book and a fountain pen. I should feel most uncomfortable if I went away leaving that obligation unsettled."

He drew out his check-book and fountain pen and smiled resolutely at Grismer, whose dark golden eyes rested on him with an intentness that he could scarcely endure.

"Would you let me give it to you, Cleland?"

"I can't, Grismer. . . . It's splendid of you."

"I shall not need the money," said Grismer, almost absently, and for an instant his gaze grew vague and remote. Then he turned his head again, where it lay cradled on his clasped hands behind his neck.

"You won't let me give it to you, I know. And there's no use telling you that I shall not need the money. You won't believe me. . . . You won't understand how absolutely meaningless is money to me—just now. Well, then—write in what you care to offer."

Beyond Price

"I can't do that, Grismer."

The other smiled and, still smiling, named a figure. And Cleland wrote it out, detached the check, started to rise, but Grismer told him to lay it on the table beside his glass of orange juice.

"It's a thing no man can pay for," said Cleland, looking at the model.

Grismer said quietly:

"The heart alone can pay for anything. . . . A gift without it is a check unsigned. . . . Cleland, I've spoken to you twice since you have returned from abroad—but you have not understood. And there is much unsaid between us. It must be said some day. . . . There are questions you ought to ask me. I'd see any other man in hell before I'd answer. But I'll answer you."

Cleland turned his eyes, heavy with care, on this man who was speaking.

Grismer said:

"There are three things in the world which I have desired—to stand honorably and well in the eyes of such people as your father and you; to win your personal regard and respect; to win the love of Stephanie Quest."

In the tense silence he struck a match and relighted his pipe. It went out again and grew cold while he was speaking:

"I lost the consideration of such people as your father; in fact, I never gained it at all. . . . And it was like a little death to something inside me. . . . And as for Stephanie"—— He shook his head. "No," he said, "there was no love in her to give me. There is none now. There never will be."

"You won't question me, I suppose. It's the pride in you, Cleland. But my pride is dead; I cut its throat. . . . So I'll tell you what you ought to know.

"I always was in love with her, even as a boy—after that single glimpse of her there in the railroad station. It's odd how such things really happen. Your people had no social interest in mine. I shall use a more sinister term: your father held my father in contempt. So there was no chance for me to know you and Stephanie except as I was thrown with you in school."

"You can never know what a boy suffers who is fiercely proud, who is ready to devote himself soul and body to another boy, and who knows that he is considered inferior. It drives him to strange perverseness, to illogical excesses—to anything which may conceal the hurt—the raw, quivering heart of a boy. So we fought with fists. You remember. You remember, too, probably, many things I said and did to intensify your hostility and contempt—like a hurt thing biting at its own wounds—"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Not Dependable

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen years of age and engaged to a young fellow two years my senor. Some time ago he hurt my feelings very much and I broke off with him. Soon after that he went to a different State. My girl friend corresponded with him and in one of her letters she told him that my regards and told him that if he really cared for me he should write me. He immediately began to correspond with me, and came back very soon. About two months ago he went away again. When he left he told me he would be back again about September and that he would then settle down. I have received no mail from him, and upon seeing his people they tell me that they know nothing of him or whereabouts. My friends tell me to forget him, but it is impossible, as I love him entirely too much.

B.

THE young man doesn't sound very dependable—not the sort to make a good husband—not the type on whom you can count. Of course you can forget him, if you just make a determined effort to fill your mind with study and other interests. If you could part with him because of a remark that hurt your feelings, your devotion for him isn't made of the stuff on which to build a life-partnership.

Spoiling a Friendship

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Two years ago I was introduced to a man about twenty-one, four years my senior. He called at my home once or twice a week and suddenly he stopped coming to see me.

A month ago I was standing at my stoop with my parents when this young man came over to us. He spoke very pleasantly to me and asked if he could call to see me again. We are now going about together.

I care a great deal for him, but I am in doubt whether he cares for me. At times he acts very queerly when we are at parties. He will stare at attractive girls. I am not an attractive girl, but am considered pretty and accomplished. ANXIOUS.

DON'T you like to look at attractive looking people—at beautiful scenes—at things charming in the eyes? Of course. That's only natural. Now, don't spoil a fine friendship which may ripen into love by picking flaws in it. Nothing in this world is perfect, nothing reaches the ideal—but we have a way of making reality less than it should be by carping at it and wishing it were other than it is.

Chaperoning a Fiancee

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am engaged to a young man who lives in a distant city. On account of business it would be impossible for him to come to New York before next Spring. We do not want to wait that long until we marry, but the only thing to be done is for me to go there. I am already on with his family, and have had an extended visit with them. Under the circumstances would it be proper for me to go to him to be married? I would have to go unaccompanied. PUZZLED.

UNDER the circumstances your fiance's family will chaperone you and entertain you. So there is no more reason for you to hesitate about taking the trip to his home than there would be for you to worry over any long train journey.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND

Richards

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

RICHARDS
VARIATIONS — Richardson, Richeson, Richey, Richie, Richart, Rickard, Rickards, Rickert, Ricker, Rickey, Rickett, Ricketts, Riches, Ricardi, Ricciardi, Reichard.
RACIAL ORIGIN — Teutonic.
SOURCE—A given name.

THE Normans left their stamp not only on England, but upon all Europe, for while they colonized by no means all of the latter, there was a period in medieval times when the Norman arms had subdued about all of the European continent, and Norman rulers held sway in Italy, Spain, France and parts of what is now Germany, as well as in England.

Nor did the Normans have to do more than merely rule most of these sections to leave among them, as one of their legacies, the given name of Richard. Meaning "stern king," it was naturally a name to appeal to such a warlike and dominating race as these Teutons of the middle ages, and one which naturally became usual among the various Norman families ruling in different sections of Europe. In turn, kings' names were generally popular among the populace in all lands. Hence it became a widespread given name first, and then a family name throughout most of Europe.

Richeson, as well as Richards, is a shortened form of Richardson, and Richey, Richie, and Richie are shortenings of Richeson. Rickey and Ricketts and Ricket are developments of names formed from nicknames of Richard through the use of the diminutive ending "et." Rickart, Rickards, Rickert and Ricker show German influences, while Ricardi and Ricciardi are natural pronunciations of the Italian tongue. Reichard is found in Alsace and Lorraine.

The Rickers in America are all descended from George and Maturin Ricker, who, early in the seventeen hundreds, came to America from Saxony. These two brothers were so singularly devoted that the love of each for the other has come down in history. It is related that they both said they wished to die together. They lived side by side in garrison houses in what was then called Dover Point, New Hampshire. The Indians, hearing of this, lay in wait, George started out of his house. They shot and killed him. Maturin came to see what was the trouble, and he was killed too. These two brothers were the ancestors of some of the sturdiest and most progressive of Americans, settled through the New England States.

Monday—Cochran.

The Adventures of Ann

By Hal Coffman

CHAPTER XXI.

THE night of Harwood's party the mysterious woman friend of Ann's met Harwood in the conservatory. The rest of the guests were dancing and having a good time, but to this woman it had ceased to be fun. She longed to get out of it all, back to her home in the country, where she could forget, if possible, her life with Harwood, and start over.

As she sat meditating and realizing that her only source of living was the money that Harwood gave her, he passed through on his way to join the others. She called to him. "Won't you sit down a moment, Jack? I've something important I want to ask you."

It was evident Harwood had been drinking, and with an angry glance, "Well, what is it?" he threw himself in a chair near her.

"I just wanted to ask you," she continued, "if you won't let me have enough money so I can go back home and start life anew. I am nothing to you any more and I am sure I would be happier if I could go back home to the country, where some day I could live down my past and perhaps forget. You are infatuated with this young Ann and I don't wish to be here and see her led to such a fate as mine. Please, please, Jack, for the sake of old times, let me go back home and out of your life forever." And she held out pleading hands toward him.

Harwood looked at her for a moment with a sneer and said: "I suits me very well in your being near at hand where I can have you arrange the things I want, Ann's family would not allow her to go about the way they do if it weren't for you. So you will stay just where you are until it is no longer necessary for you to do otherwise. I will not have my plans thwarted in any way."

"And what of my plans, Mr. Harwood?" said a girl's voice behind him. They both turned and saw Ann standing before them.

HON AND DEARIE

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

A Good Man Is Hard to Find

POP AND GRANDPOP ARGUE OVER THE CHOICE OF BEST MAN FOR HON'S WEDDING.
HON HAS NOTHING TO SAY ABOUT IT.
I CLAIM THAT BLUBBER WOULD BE THE BEST BEST MAN WE COULD GET.
HE'S A GOOD GUY - BUT THERE'S ALL KINDS OF GOOD.
AND I KNOW HE WOULDN'T - WE'VE AT LEAST GOT TO PICK A GUY WHO OWNS A DRESS SUIT.
SO HE'D LOOK HIS BEST
WHY DOES HE HAVE TO HAVE A BEST MAN - WOULDN'T ANY KIND OF A MAN DO?
THE BEST MAN STANDS UP FOR HIM. HE'LL BE TOO SCARED TO STAND UP FOR HIMSELF.
I'LL BE HIS LAST STAND.
IF THEY THINK THEY'RE GOING TO RUN MY WEDDING, THEY'VE GOT ANOTHER GUESS.
SHE CONSIDERS HIM THE BEST MAN.
REMEMBER DEARIE - YOUR MOST EXTENSIVE GIFTS WILL COME FROM THEM - SO HUMOR THEM.
THE REAL BEST MAN
THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS A BEST MAN.
HER NOSE IS OUT OF JOINT.
ALL I CAN SAY IS THE BEST MAN IS GOING TO GET THE WORST OF IT.
COMEDIAN
WHAT WORRIES ME IS WHICH HAT WILL LOOK BEST ON ME.
YOU'RE THE WORST I'VE MET.

New York Market Closes With Losses Ranging from 1 to 7 Points

By BROADAN WALL

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

New York, Sept. 25.—The grand slam executed by Henry Ford when he suddenly announced a slashing of prices Wednesday resulted in further selling of industrial stocks yesterday. Practically the whole list was sold with the exception of the railroads, in which a small volume of good buying developed. Some of the buying of railroads was for the account of traders who are heavily short of the industrials and are buying the stocks of the smaller roads for the purpose of hedging.

The selling began shortly after the opening and although final rallies developed during the session, the close showed losses ranging from 1 to 7 points. The tire and motor stocks led the decline and Studebaker, Kelly-Springfield, General Motors and Goodrich sold at new low levels for the year.

The long expected financing by the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company was announced, and as a result the stock sold down to 55½, off seven points for the day and a decline of about 110 points from the high mark reached in 1919. When traders realized that the new issue would carry attractive rights, the stock rallied and closed at 58¾.

Copper and steel shares were shaky all during the day, and while the immediate outlook for the steel companies, especially their dividends, is not particularly good, it is hard to understand how the coppers can go much lower. There is, of course, some stocks left on hand in this country, but production has been materially cut down, and the surplus is being gradually disposed of.

Amusement Expenditures

Although people in this country are now showing reluctance to buy goods not absolutely required, they are not refraining from spending money for entertainment. A Washington reported that national expenditures for amusement are still approximating $4,000,000,000 a month. The estimate is based upon war tax receipts by the U. S. Treasury Department.

Character

is the foundation of success, practical knowledge its retaining walls.

Given a group of men of good character and practical knowledge bonded together in a common enterprise and the success of that undertaking is reasonably assured.

The Jersey Central reports for the year ended December 31, 1919, net after charges $5,095,625, against $3,903,307 for 1918.

PRICES DECLINE IN BOSTON

Auto Accessory Shares Weak on Local Exchange; Curb Starts Downward Trend

The Boston market opened with a heavy tone and recessions were the rule during the morning. The price range was a little broader than during the preceding session and declines varied from fractions to more than three points. While quiet, auto accessory shares were weak. On single transactions Dunn & Bingham dropped 3¾ and Ohio Body 1¾. Their decline reflected the prominence of auto and tire stocks in the New York recessional. Both of the Boston issues named sold at new 1920 lows. Coppers were given little attention but had a weak tone. The four issues with the largest turnover in a dull market were American Pneumatic, which advanced a fraction, and Big Ledge, United Shoe and Davis Daly, which closed a little lower.

HIGHS FOR THE YEAR.

Two issues to sell at their highs for the year on this exchange were New River preferred and New Haven. The latter made best showing early in the day. It closed ¼ off. A low for the year was recorded for Root & Van Dervoort, issues to deal with from one to two-point losses were. Mohawk, Lake Shore, St. Mary's Land, Elder, Wickwire, West End and Gray & Davis. Mexican investment was up 2 and New River preferred 1¼ at the finish. National Leather, Waldorf, Loew's, Inc., and American Telephone gained a little. Stocks to sell on dividend were Eastern Manufacturing, Island Creek common and preferred, Pond Creek, Warren Brothers first and second preferred, and Merchant Investment preferred.

CURB PRICES LOWER.

Curb prices ruled lower at the opening, and the majority of active issues were off at the close of the market. Business was on a somewhat increased scale, and trading even narrower than before this week. The leaders were Arizona Tip Top, Eureka and Merrimac Development.

Overnight gains were United Verde Extension ½, Mutual 4 cents, Eureka 2 cents, Arizona Silver 2 cents, Santa Maria 2 cents and Howard 4 cents.

Declines included Republic Navigation ¼, Boston & Montana ¼, Alvarado ½, Tip Top 1 cent, Merrimac Development 2 cents, Silver Reef 3 cents, Consolidated 5 cents, and First National 5 cents.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

Thirteen ships were loaded with 838,000 bushels of grain at the Boston elevator during the week ended Sept. 18, according to the Inland Oil & Transport company.

The National Union Bank of Boston has declared its dividend of 2¼ per cent., payable October 1 to stockholders of record.

Simms Petroleum's Homer production is expected to reach 1,000 barrels a day and the company has increased its output there by the completion of 10 new wells, according to the Simms Petroleum Co. of Texas, capital of 700 barrels.

Stockholders Mask will receive bids until 11 a. m. September 28 for temporary loan of $50,000, maturing in 30 days from November 17, 1920.

Mayor Curley will receive proposals until 10 a. m. September 27 for the purchase of $1,000,000 of bonds, dated September 1 and bearing interest at 5 per cent.

Net sales aggregating $208,316 for August of 10 companies owned by the Massachusetts Lighting Companies Trustees, Inc., and 11 companies owned by the Massachusetts Electric Companies, an increase of $43,184. For the seven months ended August 31 net sales were $1,607,000, the companies say, an increase of $76,000.

Net profits for the year ended June 30 of Sampling & Power Company are under-stood to be $1,000,000, after deduction of all charges, bond interest and extraordinary items.

Plymouth stockholders voted at their annual meeting to pay a bonus of 10 per cent. on salaries of $2,000 or less per annum, and 5 per cent. to be offered employees on such terms as directors may determine on company's sales for the year totalled $28,400,000.

TIRE INDUSTRY IS BEING LIQUIDATED

It is said that the tire industry is going through one of the largest liquidating movements in its history, and the transition from unprecedented production to normal summer just passed is regarded as sharper than experienced in either the leather or woolen trades.

One manufacturer believes that at the beginning of this year the stock of tires held in this country will be the smallest in many months, and that dealers will be very much stocked as a rule. He thinks production this year may reach 35,000,000 pneumatic tires. Early in 1920 the estimate was 45,000,000.

BOSTON FIRM OFFERS MOVING PICTURE STOCK

People who want to invest in the stock of a moving picture corporation may be interested in the 125,000 Class A shares of D. W. Griffith, Incorporated, which are offered by C. Gibbs & Co. of No. 80 State street, Boston. The shares are issued by the Maryland Corporation, which will continue the production of Griffith motion pictures. Mr. Griffith, who has had such successes as "Birth of a Nation," "Hearts of the World" and "Broken Blossoms," will direct future productions, under a long term contract, and is said to have "Way Down East" as his next picture. Minimum gross earnings should amount to $2,500,000.

It is stated in a circular that gross receipts from pictures produced by the Griffith organization during the past twenty-seven months have been approximately $7,000,000, and it is estimated on completion of their runs gross receipts from these pictures will exceed $10,000,000, and after allowing for all expenses of production and distribution net earnings will approximate $3,000,000.

BOY AGAIN FLEES IN GIRL'S GARB

Escapes Mother and Disappears from Watertown Home Wearing Sister's Clothing

Elwood Nichols, aged fourteen, a freshman at the Watertown High School, has again fled from his home, No. 64 Bates road, Watertown, attired in girl's clothing, the property of his sister. This is the second time within 48 hours that the boy has left home in female garb.

The boy's father yesterday notified the police that his son was missing. A policeman saw what he thought was a girl loitering near the Watertown car barns and acting in a suspicious manner. The policeman took "her" in charge, and a superior officer, aware of Nichols' mania for impersonating a girl, notified his father.

The father on arriving at the police station snatched the hat and wig from his son's head revealing his disguise and took him home.

His mother later brought him to a dentist to have his teeth attended to. He evaded his mother, hurried back to his home and donned the wig and garments of his sister again fled. The police of Watertown and Boston are now searching for him.

MAYOR RECEIVES THREE MORE "DEATH NOTES"

Mayor Peters has received three more threatening letters, making a total of six in forty-eight hours.

All three were mailed in Boston, and all were anonymous. They threatened not only the Mayor's life but also the public buildings of the city. The Mayor sent them at once to police headquarters for investigation.

"Apparently," said the Mayor, "some or several persons, with a queer sense of humor, think they are having some fun with me. I don't believe they are warnings of any real danger. They are silly."

SERMON ON DISCONTENT AT NEWTON TRINITY

"The Spirit That Finds No Rest—The Subtle Malady of Discontent—Its Cause and Cure," will be the subject of the sermon tomorrow morning at 10:45 in Trinity Church, Newton Centre, by the rector, the Rev. Edward D. Sullivan.

Clark Settles, violinist, will render Handel's Largo; prayer, by Caesar Franck, and Chaminade, by Raffe.

The beautiful new chapel, in dedicated Gothic, is approaching completion, the stone work being nearly finished.

EX-PASTOR PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO EMBEZZLING

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 25.—The Rev. Stephen Plaza, former pastor of the Virgo Cross Polish Church in this city, and under indictment on the charge of embezzlement of $13,-271.54 of funds of the church, pleaded not guilty when arraigned in the criminal session of the Hillsborough County Superior Court in this city.

Former Newsboy Starts Advertising Agency

WILLIAM W. SAXE.

William W. Saxe, for nineteen years identified with the newspaper business in Boston, and for the past year associated with a local advertising agency, has branched out independently into the advertising business.

Incorporated under the name of the Saxe Advertising Agency, Inc., Saxe has opened offices at No. 318 Washington street, with a large force of solicitors and office assistants.

Saxe is well known in Dorchester, where he lived many years. He began his business career as a newsboy, graduating finally on the circulation staff of a large Boston daily.

Some years ago he abandoned circulation work for the newspaper advertising field and as a solicitor and executive acquired an experience of inestimable value for agency work. He is prominent in many social, fraternal and business organizations. At present Saxe lives in Allston.

3,000-MILE DASH WITH FILM

The rapidly-traveling imaginations of press agents have made wild dashes across the continent of film actors and actresses facts of bygone news value. But when the level-headed, cool-minded gentleman who occupies the general manager's chair of one of the biggest film firms in the country leap out of the leather-upholstered mahogany, hop aboard a train and beat it East from Los Angeles as quick as God and the rails will permit, that's a different matter.

That's why out in Los Angeles a lot of scribes are spending sleepless nights trying to fathom the reason why Hunter Lovelace, general manager of the Associated Producers' Corporation of America dashed out of his office September 11 and boarded a train East. Los Angeles movie folks are sure that something big making deal is about to be pulled off.

But when Mr. Lovelace stepped off the train at the South Bay Station after his six-day ride he divulged the secret. The train wreck did it, a wreck in which two films of "The Leopard Woman," the latest big thriller of love, adventure and a woman's wiles got lost.

Now "The Leopard Woman" is scheduled for projection on the Park Theatre beginning Monday next. When the two films got lost in the train wreck, there was no other film nearer than Los Angeles. A film simply had to be here before Monday. The firm didn't dare to trust any ordinary messengers. So Mr. Lovelace grabbed the hat in one hand and the film in the other and dashed East. The film was privately shown yesterday and will go on as per schedule Monday at the Park.

They Call It "Gasoline"

But Moterists Question the Nature of Some of the Stuff Sold as Such in Massachusetts—Is Legislation Necessary?

Young legislators-to-be may be searching for proper subjects for new legislation. May we not call their attention to the complaints of motorists that some mighty poor stuff is being peddled within the limits of Massachusetts as gasoline?

So far as the American has been able to find out the QUALITY of the gasoline sold in this State is the concern of no official bureau. The Bureau of Standards, of the Department of Labor, sees to it that WEIGHTS AND MEASURES are up to the standard set by law. This has to do with QUANTITIES.

The Massachusetts baker who sells inferior bread is brought to task as soon as he is discovered. We ALL know what happens to the chap who sells a milk that is below grade.

Massachusetts motorists, whose contributions in fees and taxes form so large a part of the revenues of the Commonwealth, are entitled to know that what they buy for gasoline at roadside stations IS gasoline. The law only goes halfway when it seeks to establish that a gallon is a gallon. "A gallon of WHAT?" asks the man who pays. The government should set up the machinery necessary to give him his answer.

What About Public Debts?

Would the World End?

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

France owes one hundred and seventy-six billions of francs, thirty-five thousand million dollars in our money.

Germany "owes" so many billions that it tires her even to think of it. She dares not think how much she DOES OWE. England owes billions, including five billions owed to us. In Poland the financial situation is fantastic, marks are run off the printing press at the rate of hundreds of billions in a week.

The remaining financial question there, and in other places in Europe, seems to be the question of paper shortage.

All these national "debts" interest somebody; SOMEBODY owns them. What would really happen if tomorrow these debts were suddenly wiped out, declared null and void? Financiers tell you that the world, financially speaking, would come to an end, but it wouldn't.

Millions that now have millions owed to them would suddenly have nothing due them and would have to do without. What would happen? Nothing very important.

The Southern States owed many millions, they didn't pay and the world went on.

Russia, before the Bolsheviks, owed scores of billions, thirty billion francs to France alone. Russia isn't paying, never will pay, and the world goes on. The money stays in Russia, fewer taxes for peasants, that's all.

Solon, the wise man, proved in ancient days that many things could be done to debts and to creditors without ending the world. A Solon might be useful now.

Various Things, Such as

England's Problem, Political Prisoners, Trouble in Rome

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

England waits to know whether she is to have coal from her miners or to see all factories, railways, etc., closed down? There all unions work together, and three great organizations, miners, railway men and transport workers, have, combined, a power greater than that of the government—for they can stop, if they choose, and without them government cannot function.

While England wonders how to solve her coal problem, and how to keep for the government the sixty million pounds a year profit in taxation, taken from export of coal, the new German government goes ahead with a plan for the nationalization of mines.

In Germany they have got beyond wondering whether they will do what workmen want. They are only asking themselves HOW they can manage it?

The marvelous thing is that the German government has persisted without change or breakdown from the armistice until now.

To those who have influence and want peace, with freedom from anarchistic outbreaks.

Advise your friends in this administration to release political prisoners, beginning with Eugene Debs, now locked up in Atlanta Prison.

The principal question for you to consider is not "Did those men express, write or think opinions that we object to?" The question is rather "What is going to be the result of keeping these political prisoners in jail, with the sight of them behind the bars as a constant incentive to hatreds, rebellion and violence among their followers?"

In Europe they understand government and know a little about public opinion. As soon as the war ended political prisoners were set free. This included prisoners that advised against the draft, and against soldiering, the "crime" for which Debs was convicted.

In Rome, which has just passed the fiftieth anniversary of the city's existence as capital of united Italy, there are problems more difficult, actually, than those faced by England with her labor and Irish troubles, or by Germany with the load of defeat on her back.

With extraordinary tact and intelligence Italian statesmen have dealt with the outbreak among workers, the seizing of factories, etc. They have used arguments instead of machine guns, knowing the Italian populations have had enough of machine guns during the last five years and would not take kindly to them.

The most serious Italian trouble appears to be an outbreak of the most radical element against religion and all that represents it, as shown in the effort to break into churches. There is more danger of trouble, serious and not to be remedied, from that direction than from any temporary outbreak of "Sovietism" in the factories.

Jimmy and His War Bride

Copyright, 1920, by International Feature Service, Inc.

Our hero takes his bride and her fourteen children for a little Alpine climbing. Suddenly there was a low rumbling noise overhead. The overhead is bothering our hero just now. Are they in danger? Yeah, looks like it. With a yell of terror, Homer, the urbane and popular guide, started to beat it for Stamford, Ct. Can they escape? Some people say they have no more chance than a Chinese laundryman to get into the Society Blue Book. But be sure to read the next instalment. It's full of red-blooded, gripping—

New Menace in the Boston Housing Crisis

A NEW menace in the Boston housing crisis is revealed by Dr. Payson Smith, Commissioner of Education of Massachusetts, in an article written for tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"Seeing that its people are properly housed is as much of the city's duty as seeing that they are provided with parks and proper street car service," says Dr. Smith. He warns that the rising tide of immigration greatly increases the gravity of the housing shortage in Boston.

Dr. Smith fears a return to the old-time slums unless immediate attention is paid to the problem. The situation he regards as disturbing to American citizens and particularly to American educators.

Councillor Henry E. Hagan says he wants Mayor Peters to come forward and state if there are any other reasons why he should not proclaim a housing shortage in Boston than the one he gave based on an opinion of the corporation counsel. Councillor Hagan, in an article written for the Boston Sunday Advertiser, calls on the mayor to give any ideas he may have on the housing situation.

How a Russian prince won the heart and hand of a Boston society girl is interestingly told in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser. The scenes of this newest international romance are laid in the Back Bay and at Harvard, where the prince, who used to live in a Petrograd palace, is now rooming in an unpretentious dormitory.

That the prince is an unusual young man is proved by the fact he has managed to spend three years at Harvard in practical obscurity.

The first complete account of the pilgrimage abroad of 239 Knights of Columbus, including Boston and New England men, is told for readers of tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser by a Boston member of the party, Edward J. O'Neil, past district deputy of the K. of C.

He tells of the remarkable greetings given in France, Italy and Switzerland to the American pilgrims. Photographs of the American cemetery in France where 26,000 American dead lie buried and of some of the New England pilgrims in front of the Lafayette statue at Metz accompany the story.

The slaughter of Irish men, women and children is kept from the English public, declares Desmond MacCarthy, political correspondent of the Manchester Guardian. If information on the situation in Ireland were not edited by the British government, moderate councils would have a better chance to prevail, he asserts.

Shaw Desmond presents a picture of Arthur Griffith, who he calls "The Brain of Sinn Fein." Griffith, says Desmond, is ready to meet any crisis in Ireland.

British greed is a peril to the world, writes Maximilian Harden, the clearest thinker in Germany. England's aim, he warns, is to disrupt Europe and seize the salvage. To accomplish this, she is ready to ignore any treaty clause standing in her way, Harden charges.

Vicente Blasco Ibanez, the famous Spanish author, has another in his series of articles on the European situation. He quotes Russians who are opposed to Bolshevism as saying its advocates are either mistaken or are playing a cruel joke on the world.

How sorrow has trailed the magic career of the Pickfords—Mary, Jack and Lottie—is told in a special article in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser. These sisters and their brother who gained fame while yet in their twenties could not buy happiness with all their millions.

If one is crossing Tremont at Winter street it is well to give heed to what Albert Swett, "the talking traffic cop," has to say and to watch his arm. An interesting story of this policeman who mixes repartee with his signals to thousands of people and vehicles each day appears in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Heads up, eyes front and ears open is the watchword when he is on duty at this busy crossing. His philosophy to the American pilgrims. Photographs of the American cemetery in France

More Truth Than Poetry

The Cheerful Journey

By S. E. KISER

THE leaves are turning red
Upon the wooded slopes.
And still the way ahead
Beads on to brighter hopes.
The nestlings all have strayed
To regions that are wide;
We cease to haunt the shade,
And seek the sunny side.
The dews are cool and deep,
Sometimes the hills are steep,
But still there's laughter where the streams
O'er rocky ledges leap.

THE way ahead is long,
But something in the air
Suggests a hopeful song
And urges us to dare;
And now and then a smile
From some courageous friend
Still makes the steepest mile
Come quickly to an end.
The leaves that hide the wall
Will soon begin to fall,
But, crimsoning, the far hills look
Their loveliest after all.

WHY look ahead with fear
Or lag upon the way?
The world is full of cheer,
Blown on from yesterday;
Still eager hearts are thrilled,
And fruit is ripening
Where Autumn has fulfilled
The promises of Spring!
Why halt or step aside?
Come, brother, fail in stride;
The world is full of loveliness
That Summer has supplied.

We can't help wishing that some candidate would use a magnavox for the purpose of letting the profiteer hear a few things that might cause them to change their ways.

An Amazing Editorial

The Case of Mayor MacSwiney

(From the London Times.)

WE can recall no parallel in the history of this country to the duel now reaching its climax in Brixton prison. Men have suffered before for their ideals. Rebellions have been crushed sternly and rebels executed. The law of treason has claimed many victims; and the political innovator had often pain in his body for the darning of his mind. But the struggle against authority, sustained to the point of death by the Lord Mayor of Cork, and thrown into all the fiercer relief by the influences of civilization on its attendant circumstances, transcends all our previous experience.

In an age when almost every citizen is inured to tales of suffering, and the majority of men have themselves confronted violent death or vicariously endured its terrors on behalf of others, human sympathy may, perhaps, have become anesthetized and human imagination satisfied to the point of dulness. Yet we are indeed mistaken if the mind of the public is not profoundly stirred in the present instance.

The Lord Mayor of Cork has doubtless defied the law in so far as he has prominently identified himself with Sinn Fein activities. Yet his offence can be traced to no base motive; and his conduct and utterances in prison have apparently been inspired by an idealism which, however foreign to that of the British people, no just man will fail to appreciate. In these circumstances his death can only sanctify what would otherwise be regarded as an error, and lend to his memory a glamour dangerously distorting to true estimation of his policy and ideals.

Because behind all its excess in violence and all its crudeness in ideal, we have recognized in the new Irish movement the traces of self-sacrificing and fearless devotion, our condemnation of it has often been qualified. The government has, on the other hand, acted as though Sinn Fein were a purely criminal organization and Sinn Feiners necessarily criminals.

We have expressed unhesitatingly and with grave emphasis our profound disapproval of the course which the government is following. We have indicated another, which, in our opinion, would compromise neither the national honor nor even such reputation for strength as the government possesses. We can do no more.

AND SOMEBODY else.
WILL COME along.
AND HE'LL stop.
AND YOU'LL talk.
ABOUT MR. MacSwiney.
OR THE explosion.
OR WHATEVER it is.
AND IT'S very friendly.
AND NEIGHBORLY.

AND I like it.
AND THERE'S one man.
WHO ALWAYS smiles.
AND SHAKES hands.
AND I like him.
AND HE always asks me.
HOW I am.
AND I tell him.
AND ASK him.
HOW HE is.
AND ALWAYS.
WE'RE BOTH all right.
AND YESTERDAY.
I WAS with Blatch.
ONE OF the boys.
ON OUR street.
AND I met the man.
AND HE smiled.
AND SAID.
"HOW ARE you today?"
AND I said.
"I NEVER was better."
AND I asked Blatch,
WHO THE man was.
AND BLATCH said.
"HE IS the undertaker.
"UP AT the corner."
AND THERE was I.
TRYING TO be neighborly.
AND TELLING him.
I NEVER was better.

I THANK you.

Even Earth Is Not a Perpetual Motion Machine—Must Draw Energy From the Sun

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Speaking of perpetual motion, how about the earth itself as a perpetual motion machine?—J. F., Chicago."

THIS inquiry is a good example of a very common misunderstanding about what is meant by the so-called problem of perpetual motion. A perpetual motion machine would be "a machine that would create energy." This no mechanical contrivance is able to do. Simply taking advantage of some continuously acting "natural force" does not solve the mechanical problem. A waterwheel driven by Niagara would not be an example of a perpetual motion machine, and neither would the problem be solved if you could gear your machine, in some mysterious way, to the rotating earth.

An example of this sort is the "radium clock," invented by R. J. Strutt, the English electrical expert. The action of this clock depends upon the emission of electrified particles from a bit of radium which periodically recharge, and so drive apart, the leaves of an electroscope, which are periodically discharged by coming into contact with platinum wires. So there you have a kind of pendulum that could go on longer than Rome existed without the addition of any energy from outside—yet it no more solves the problem of perpetual motion than does a boy's paper windmill that runs as long as he runs.

Sun Gives Motive Power.

The earth has, perhaps, been flying for hundreds of millions of years around the sun, and may continue to travel in practically the same orbit for hundreds of millions of years to come, and yet the earth would not be regarded by Divine Intelligence itself as a perpetual motion machine, for the simple reason that at every instant the sun has to put forth energy in the form of gravitation to keep the earth going. And that action of the sun upon the earth may be likened to the pull of your hand upon the strings of a sling in whose pocket a stone is kept whirling.

If the gravitational string connecting the earth with the sun were suddenly snapped, the earth would dart away on a straight line, owing to the tangential component of its motion, as the whirled stone does when one of the strings is released. At first sight, this tangential component of the orbital motion might appear to answer the definition of perpetual motion. But it is simply a result of inertia, and therefore involves no acting force. If a force were acting upon the body, it would either go continually faster or continually slower, or else its direction would continually change, as occurs when the motion is orbital.

Machine Cannot Create

When the stone is released from the sling its velocity is gradually slowed down to zero by air, or other resistance. It could only overcome that resistance and retain its initial velocity through the addition of energy from without. Similarly, if the earth were released from the sun it would fly on through space until it encountered some resisting body, and the moment it did so it would lose some of its motion, unless a corresponding amount of energy were added to it. The moment the flying earth was called upon to do any work in overcoming resistance, or in setting something else in motion, it would begin to part with energy, and could not of itself, make good the loss.

So, if you could set a machine going without friction or any other cause of loss of energy, although as long as the circumstances were unchanged it would run on uninterruptedly, still it would not be a perpetual motion machine, because it could do no mechanical work without losing energy, which would have to be continually resupplied to it from without if the machine were to be kept going.

Stars and Stripes

A jury assessed a woman $50,000 for alienating another woman's husband. Apparently there's no end to the rising cost of high living.

We are expecting daily to hear from the statistician who is going to find that the number of people killed annually in this country by trucks exceeds the casualties in the world war.

In certain European countries the dollar is worth only six or seven cents. This is going to make some of our grocers jealous when they hear about it.
